QUEBEC (CP) — A $1.1-billion income security plan involving large increases for Quebecers on welfare and families with children under 18 was announced Wednesday by Premier Robert Bourassa.

Bourassa said two-thirds of the extra money will come from Ottawa. Cost of the new family allowance program will be $399 million, while the new welfare program will cost $412 million.

The new program, which goes into effect Jan. 1, 1974, was made possible by an agreement between the Quebec and Ottawa governments to overhaul and integrate the existing twin social security systems operating in the province.

It seeks to re-establish a "balance between social welfare payments and the minimum wage" through integration of family allowance and welfare programs, Bourassa told a news conference.

Under the new family allowance scheme a family will receive $15 a month for the first child, $22 for the second, $33 for the third and $37 for each additional child under 12 plus $5 extra for each child between the ages of 12 and 17.

The current federal-provincial joint program pays families in Quebec an average of $10 a child.

A couple on welfare will receive $272 a month starting in 1974, compared with the current $206 monthly payment. A welfare family with six children will see their monthly payment increase to $509 from $434 when the program takes effect.

The premier said acceptance of the new program by Quebec effectively buries other demands made by Claude Castonguay, social affairs minister, for complete legislative priority in the social affairs field.

"In concrete terms, we have priority. We decide how much large families will receive, how much the poor will receive and the middle classes."

A new element in the plan is that family allowances will not be taxable by Quebec, whether the payments come from the federal or provincial governments.

Because of provisions of the new federal law on family allowance payments, Castonguay explained.

It will tax Quebecers on their income from federal family allowance payments.

The provincial family allowance, paid twice a year up to now, will be paid monthly under the new system.

Castonguay said that because welfare and family allowance payments together come to less than the total of minimum wage and family allowances, the new system provides an incentive to work.

Junta Hold Based On Repression

By RICHARD GOTT
Manchester Guardian

SANTIAGO — The situation in Chile appears to be far more serious than the communiques of the military junta have allowed the world to believe.

There is little evidence that the junta does not physically control the country, but it is clear that this control is being maintained with a degree of repression uncommon in Latin America.

(Soldiers armed with automatic weapons patrolling the streets of downtown Santiago early today encountered sporadic fire from snipers resisting the nine-day-old ruling military junta.

(Shots echoed through the streets despite a warning Wednesday night by Air Force Gen. Gustavo Leguía, a member of the four-man junta, that "any man who fires against our forces, dies, any man who shoots innocent persons, dies.")

For the first time since the coup eight days ago which overthrew the government of President Salvador Allende, the frontiers of the country were opened Wednesday to admit a charter plenitude of more than 100 journalists from all over the world who had been waiting in Buenos Aires.

In the first few hours after our arrival, I was able to talk to witnesses who had seen things which left them still quivering with rage, anger and shock. Shock is perhaps the best word to describe the state of mind of supporters and sympathizers of the deposed Popular Unity government.

It seems that few people were prepared for the ferocity of the counter-revolution.

In Santiago, things have been bad enough—an apparent massacre at the Technical University bodies in the Mapocho River, the destruction of the Sumar Textile factory—but reports coming in from outlying districts in the south suggest that there the repression may be worse.

One foreign girl who teaches in the southern town of Temuco got off the bus Wednesday in Santiago with a hair-raising story. Hundreds of people have been arrested, she said, accused of nothing more than co-operation with the Allende government. Lists of local people wanted by the army are read over the radio, and edited No. 30 of the Te-

U.S. FUNDS FOR CHILE

SANTIAGO — Assistance to the junta is close at hand. Wednesday morning's headline in the right-wing daily El Mercurio announced that Chile was to receive a new credit of $65 million from the Inter-American Development Bank. The president of the bank, which is dominated by the United States, said that "political changes in a country do not alter our long-term intentions."

Inflation Blamed On Rich

DAR ES SALAAM, Tanzania (Reuters) — Finance Minister John Turner of Canada made a strong call today for international controls to limit the effect of the domestic economic policies of some rich countries on world inflation.

Turner urged the meeting of Commonwealth finance ministers here to adopt his proposal in the form of a resolution in advance of next week's meeting of the 126-nation International Monetary Fund (IMF) and the World Bank in Nairobi.

He said that in his speech to the Commonwealth meeting this morning he pinpointed two ways in which some rich countries were contributing to a world inflationary situation.

Firstly, the monetary policies of some advanced countries—and officials said he clearly had in mind the United States, West Germany and Britain—by setting high interest rates for domestic reasons, were having inflationary repercussions on other countries.

Secondly, the balance of payments situation of some surplus countries had led them to enter commodity markets so strongly that they were affecting commodity prices in an inflationary way.

GAS PRICE CURB NOT BINDING

OTTAWA (CP) — There is no practical way to monitor retail and independent price increases during the voluntary price freeze agreed to by oil companies, Energy Minister Donald MacDonald said Wednesday.

He told the Commons that no new legislation is planned, but the government is ready to act on any increases that violate existing laws.

Outside the House, he said, "hundreds and perhaps thousands" of operators fall outside the limits of the freeze. But he said he hoped most would follow the example set by oil companies.

The freeze, to last until the end of January, was requested by Prime Minister Trudeau earlier this month as part of the federal effort to control inflation.

Earlier Wednesday, the Ontario Retail Gasoline Association said it will reject the government's proposed voluntary freeze.

Association manager George Coates said the general convention, meeting here, will vote to ignore the freeze because it is unfair to dealers.

He said oil companies increased their prices shortly before the Sept. 4 introduction of the freeze, while retail prices haven't risen.

Westcoast Cut Fight

Times News Services

R. B. Stokes, executive vice-president of Inland Natural Gas Co. Ltd., said Wednesday in Prince George his company will dispute Westcoast Transmission Ltd.'s method of distributing natural gas to its customers during an expected gas shortage this winter.

Stokes said British Columbia consumers should not suffer a shortage of a Canadian resource to the same extent as American consumers.

Westcoast has announced it will spread a shortage of its gas supply from northern British Columbia among its four customers by curtailing supplies by 9.3 per cent each.

Westcoast supplies 62 per cent of its daily 1.3 billion cubic feet gas flow to El Paso Natural Gas Co. in the United States. The balance is sold to Inland, B.C. Hydro and Pacific Northern Gas.

Robert Kadlec, president of Inland, said in Vancouver the company is calling a meeting of its industrial customers here Monday to discuss the situation.

He said Inland has 12 major industrial accounts and a number of these could suffer curtailment on their firm gas contracts as well as on interruptible contracts.

Kadlec said these customers include seven pulp mills which have no standby fuel because they are in the B.C. Interior. Pulp mills on the tidewater can switch to oil delivered by tankers.

In Victoria, Resources Minister Bob Williams also expressed his opposition Wednesday to exporting energy when he told reporters B.C. would not favor exporting additional electricity to Washington State to prevent the flooding of Skagit Valley.

Williams was speaking outside the house after telling the legislature B.C. would not appear before the U.S. Federal Power Commission next February.

The FPC is to hold hearings into an application by Seattle City Light and Power Co. to raise the level of the Ross Dam in the U.S. by 125 feet. The move would provide more power for Seattle while flooding B.C.'s Skagit Valley.

The province has no intention of being an intervenor in the dispute.

Keystone Cops Chase

DUNCAN — With all the excitement of a Keystone Cops chase, a Duncan police cruiser sped through town Wednesday with a private car in pursuit.

RCMP said today the incident started when a man driving on Somers Road near Duncan hit a telephone pole and sheared it off near the bottom.

Police officers arrived at the scene of the accident, but while they were investigating, a man hopped into the police cruiser and took off down the road.

The officers commandeered a car belonging to a private citizen who was waiting for the telephone pole to be moved out of the way, and gave chase.

At 6:25 p.m., about 30 minutes after the accident, the officers found their car abandoned about a quarter of a mile from the accident scene. A search was conducted of nearby woods with the help of a Nanaimo police tracking dog and, more than an hour later, a man was taken into custody.

Bob Reynolds, 27, address not known, is to appear in Duncan provincial court later today in connection with the incident.

Town On Block

SALMO (CP) — In one of the most unusual public auctions in the history of British Columbia, the entire mine, mill and townsite of Canex Placer Ltd.'s tungsten division near this community in the southeastern section of the province will be disposed of on Sept. 28 and 29.

Ritchie Brothers, a Richmond auctioneering firm, has had representatives on the site for three months indexing and cataloguing the hundreds of items to be sold.

The items include a large number of vehicles such as loaders, dump trucks, rubber-tired mining machines, compressors, transformers, a complete machine shop, a lead-zinc concentrator, conveyors, pipelines and motors.

Eighteen frame residences will be auctioned as well as two large halls, a scale house, pump house and other buildings.

Replacement value of the property is estimated at about $10 million and it is expected the auction may raise as much as $1 million.

The tungsten mill began operations during the Second World War when the supply of the metal, important in the manufacturing of steel, was limited. It closed down Sept. 1 after being in constant operation since 1947, producing either tungsten or lead and zinc.

The lead-zinc ore ran out about two years ago and the tungsten deposits were worked out this year.

Salmo is about 260 air miles east of Vancouver and some 15 miles northeast of the huge Cominco lead-zinc refinery at Trail.

White House Ends Silence, But . . .

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — The White House broke its puzzling silence of Vice President Agnew's status Wednesday with a cautious statement of support and denial of any White House effort to remove him from office.

But even as these statements were being issued there was a fresh report that a principal White House official has predicted Agnew's resignation in the next few weeks. The report came from an eastern Republican who said he was told by the official within the past few days that Agnew's departure would give the president an opportunity to set a whole new tone for the administration.

These developments came amid a barrage of reports that great tensions are building up between Agnew and the White House staff. They are based on the belief among Agnew associates that a concerted effort is under way within the administration to build up pressure for Agnew's resignation.

Meanwhile a group of house Democrats, led by Rep. John Conyers of Michigan, met Wednesday to discuss the Agnew situation but refused to reveal the substance of the closed door talks. Earlier this year, the same group explored the possibility of impeachment proceedings against President Nixon.

Another Democrat, Senate Leader Mike Mansfield said today that Agnew must be considered "innocent until proven guilty" and should be given "the benefit of the doubt."

Native Nuptials Nab Girl, 7

SYDNEY (UPI) — The Australian government said today a seven-year-old aboriginal girl, who has lived most of her life in a comfortable white foster home, has been sent back to her ancestral tribe against her will to marry a middle-aged man.

A cabinet minister told Parliament Nola would have to spend the rest of her life living in a rustic shack on the banks of a river in Australia's hinterlands.

Nola had lived with Brown and his wife in a suburb of Darwin since a few months after being born prematurely in a welfare settlement and placed in a hospital.

Bryant told the legislators the natural father of the girl, apparently concerned about her health, allowed Nola to live in a foster home after birth under the condition she be sent back at his request to be married within her tribe.

The girl lived happily with the Browns' six other children in the comfortable home and neighbors said she began primary school this year.

Bryant said she was taken from the home Sept. 12 by an officer of the department of aboriginal affairs and now lives in a shack called "Bark Humpy" on the banks of the Cadeil River, 500 miles north-east of Darwin.

"I understand in this particular tribal situation the promising has taken place in the past and that at some time in the future, say at 10 or 12, the actual promise will or is likely to be consummated," he said.

Bryant said the government has no legal power to intervene. "We can only hope that the child is happily placed with her natural parents," Bryant said.

$9,325 PER PRISONER

OTTAWA (CP) — The annual cost of keeping one person in prison has risen by almost $8,000 in the last 10 years, says a report presented to the Commons Wednesday.

The average cost of keeping a person in a penitentiary during the 1971-72 fiscal year was $9,325 compared with $3,380 in 1962-63, said the report, prepared by the solicitor-general's department.

The increased cost is due primarily to greater emphasis on rehabilitation programs, said Roger Tasse, deputy solicitor-general.

The programs, the additional staff and equipment required to put them into effect, and inflation boosted the figures, Tasse said in an interview.

Total penitentiary costs were almost $80 million in 1971-72, compared with $23.5 million in 1962-63. Prison populations increased by about four per cent annually during this period. The increase this year is 13 per cent, said Tasse.

Tobacco Pays U.S. War Aid

WASHINGTON (WP) — Under the auspices of the Food for Peace program, about 25 million pounds of tobacco were shipped to foreign countries in 1972. South Vietnam received about half of it. Cambodia received another large chunk.

Critics charge that these shipments, paid for by U.S. tax dollars, are little more than cloaked support for the U.S. tobacco industry and are, at worst, a way of covertly financing the Indochina war effort.

The charges, which have surfaced and submerged and resurfaced for years, stem from the procedures used to fund Food for Peace. Some of the program's expenditures are in the form of direct commodity donations to recipient nations. But in most cases the funds go to U.S. commodity holders who in turn ship the goods. Recipient nations are then given easy credit and repayment schedules.

However, for years the United States allowed the nations to plow the owed dollars back into their own economies — for economic development, private business expansion, and "common defence." From 1954 to 1972 about $1.9 billion in Food and Peace funds went to bolster the war machines of nations such as South Korea, South Vietnam and Cambodia through this kickback method.

These procedures were barred by Congress recently — with the exception of South Vietnam and Cambodia. Under a typical arrangement with South Vietnam, Food for Peace pays for the shipment of farm commodities with the stipulation that the funds are to be repaid in local currencies. About 80 per cent is then kicked back for "common defence" purposes.

The funds are used for personnel, equipment, clothing, military construction and construction materials, and similar items.

Cambodia uses the Food for Peace dollars for military pay and allowances.

POLICE HUNT LETTER BOMBS

LONDON (Reuters) — More than 100 suspected letter bombs were reported to Scotland Yard today following a nationwide warning to office staffs that new attacks could be on the way.

Police bomb experts raced around London and Birmingham checking suspect mail. No positive findings had been reported by noon.

But a large bomb went off during the night at an army barracks in London's Chelsea district. It injured five people, none of them seriously. Police said it was the biggest bomb to go off in London since the current wave of attacks started last month.

The warning about more letter bombs came from Scotland Yard Wednesday night. A spokesman said police had received solid information that a new onslaught was planned.

During the past month, 18 letter bombs have arrived at targets in London and British offices abroad. The attacks are generally attributed to Irish Republican Army extremists.

The bomb struck the transport section of the Duke of Yorks barracks in fashionable Kings Road, Chelsea, injuring one soldier and four youths passing by.

In Dublin, Sean MacStiofain, former chief of staff of the IRA's militant Provisional Wing, denied today that the IRA was involved in the London bomb campaign.

"If they (IRA) were responsible, the amount of damage caused would have been much greater," he told a newspaper reporter.

local government, she said, states that "for every innocent dead, ten detainees will be killed."

Supporters of the previous government have had their head shaved, she reported. And this applies not only to young people but to persons 50 or 60 years old.

This part of the country has become a stronghold of the Fascist Fatherland and Freedom Organization whose leader, Pablo Rodriguez, returned to Chile clandestinely two days before the coup and held a press conference in Temuco. Military sources said Wednesday that while the new government would pursue left-wing extremists with the utmost vigor, it was no longer necessary to pursue Fatherland and Freedom since this group had announced its intention to disband, its aims apparently having been achieved.

In Temuco as elsewhere, the urban middle class is unable to restrain its delight at what has been happening.

"We'd prefer this than to have the Russians in," is one example of the views of the supporters of the new regime.

I have not been able to verify all the stories I have been told about what has been happening in Santiago during the past week, but the general picture is of continuing clashes between the inhabitants of the shanty town slums and the police in their search for arms.

In the port of Valparaiso the resistance seems to have been stronger, and there is still no telephone contact.

There is a long list of people connected with the Allende government who have been asked to give themselves up, and they are threatened with the death penalty if they do not do so. Latin American embassies sympathetic to Allende, principally those of Mexico, Peru and Argentina, have filled up with refugees, and it is difficult for additional ones to get in. Some European embassies have been taking in people believed to be threatened. One young English visitor spent two days last week in the national stadium where thousands of prisoners, many of them foreign, are being held, and some reportedly being shot.

There is every sign of the situation getting worse. The new regime has announced that all arms must be handed in to the authorities by next Sunday. Those found possessing them after that date will be shot.

General Pedro Ewing, the new secretary general of the government, told reporters Wednesday morning that the armed forces would search everywhere for arms until they have all been found.

Chile's new military government will open up the five copper mines nationalized under Allende to private foreign and Chilean investment, officials said Wednesday.

They said the new government will pursue liberal economic policies based on private enterprise.

Lorimer Eyeing Others: Assessor

Municipal Affairs Minister James Lorimer is determined to prevent "conflict of interest" actions by all municipal employees; not just assessors, Bill Headen of Kamloops said today.

President of the B.C. Association of Assessors, Headen said Lorimer only singled out assessors Wednesday because he was talking to the BCAA when he made the promise to introduce legislation that would stop assessors from using "confidential information or special knowledge they have obtained for their own special gain."

"Judging by the way he (Lorimer) spoke at the Union of B.C. Municipalities meeting," Headen said, "he is looking at the whole area of conflict of interest. He's concerned with all municipal employees."

"There's a bad egg in every crowd but it will usually work its way out," he added.

Headen said his group of about 200 members — mainly provincial and municipal assessors — sets high standards which would never permit moonlighting in real estate or private assessments being carried out by them.

"This is what the association is all about," he said. "We realize that people have a trust in assessors and are willing to live with a system that has obvious deficiencies. Otherwise, you'd have a riot."

Headen said the BCAA welcomed Lorimer's intention of asking the association to meet with his department in an effort to design a more efficient and equitable method of assessment and taxation.

"Our big problem has been we didn't know who to talk to," Headen said. "We're technical people charged with administering a thing that's grown to be very contentious. We shy away from anything that brands us as being political in nature."

Headen said another problem was "the multiplicity of management involved in large and small municipalities as well as the provincial government."

He explained, "We (the BCAA) are taking a little bit of leadership in trying to pull this whole thing together."

Headen said the BCAA was studying how to create "a mass appraisal system" that could be of use to the entire province.

At the same time Liberal Leader David Anderson said the NDP government has created uncertainty in the province and may have created a natural gas shortage.

The potential shortage, said Anderson, is the "direct result of the NDP policies which have curbed investment in the energy transmission field as well as the energy field."

Meanwhile in Vancouver, Environment Minister Jack Davis said Canada is on "easy street" compared with the United States in the face of the growing world oil shortage and Canadians don't want to share their energy resources on a continental basis.

In a speech to the American Automobile Association's 71st annual convention, Davis said that although Canada will experience upward pressure on oil prices because of the Arab oil "squeeze", there is no reason they should have to pay the same high prices Americans will.

"Potentially we are self-sufficient in oil. We have our immense oil tar sands. We have large and unproven gas and oil resources in the far north."

"We also expect to find oil on the Grand Banks off Newfoundland. So supply, especially in the long run, shouldn't be a problem to us. We should be able to look after our own needs far out into the future," he said.

Colson Clams Up At Watergate

WASHINGTON (UPI)

After losing his bid for immunity, former White House aide Charles Colson turned silent before the Senate Watergate committee Wednesday.

Chairman Sam Ervin Jr. (D-N.C.) told reporters after the closed session that because of Colson's refusal to talk about the bugging scandal he had been eliminated as a witness when the committee resumes public hearings next Monday.

Colson declined to answer any questions about Watergate after his request for a grant of immunity from prosecution in exchange for his co-operation was unanimously rejected.

"The committee would have liked to have his testimony," Ervin told reporters. "... but he clearly is entitled under the constitution to plead the fifth amendment."

Meanwhile, working right up to a court-imposed deadline, the White House and special prosecutor Archibald Cox tried today to find a compromise to their dispute over President Nixon's Watergate tapes.

In Los Angeles, G. Gordon Liddy, already convicted in the Watergate break-in, pleaded "not guilty" in a loud, clear voice today to the burglary of the offices of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist.

Indian Decision Soon: Barrett

The provincial government will decide in two weeks whether to appoint a minister of Indian affairs.

Fred House, president of the B.C. Association of Non-Status Indians, said today Premier Barrett told him he would be making a "major announcement" on the whole question of establishing an Indian affairs department.

House was among more than 100 representatives of B.C. non-status and band Indians who met the premier and 14 cabinet ministers this morning to present a major brief on the needs of B.C. Indians. (See earlier story page 7.)

"We made it clear to the premier we don't want a department of Indian affairs," House said, adding he was optimistic Barrett would agree to their wishes.

the weather

The track of Pacific storms is now well established across southern B.C. and the Pacific northwest states. Each storm, as it arrives, brings copious amounts of moisture with it and although the heaviest precipitation appears to be occurring south of the border, considerable amounts are being reported at most places in B.C. Only the north coast is far enough north of the track and is escaping with only partly cloudy skies.

The latest in the series of storms is a dying low pressure area centered southwest of Vancouver Island. In its death throes it managed to give intermittent rain today to all except the north coast. And as the low pressure area moves inland Friday there will be a brief let up in the rain although a few showers are likely in the interior.

Peron Win Sure

Buenos Aires (Reuter) — Gen. Juan Peron is so sure of victory in Argentina's presidential elections Sunday that he has not bothered to campaign.

The only question is whether we will win an outright victory, with over 50 per cent of the vote, or need a run-off election.

The campaign, which began on a low key by all four candidates, has almost dropped out of sight since last week's Chilean coup.

The coup has left Argentines, who last May emerged from seven years of military rule, keenly aware that their country now is surrounded by military regimes in Chile, Bolivia, Paraguay, Brazil and Uruguay.

Portraits of the late Chilean president Salvador Allende, who was reported to have committed suicide during the coup, dominate the Argentine capital.

Posters of Gen. Peron, his third wife, Isabel, who is running as vice-presidential candidate, and his late second wife Evita—still the darling of the Argentine masses 21 years after her death—go virtually unnoticed.

OTHERS HAVE NONE

The other candidates, their coffers bare in this second election in just over six months, cannot even afford to put up posters.

They are resorting to poorly printed handbills carrying only the names of their candidates.

"We will cover the walls in chalk," proclaimed radical vice-presidential candidate Fernando de la Rúa at the start of the campaign. But even this promise has not been kept.

The only mass meetings in the capital during the last two weeks have been recent nightly protest youth marches against the overthrow and death of Allende.

Peron sent Isabel on a whistle-stop tour of the provinces last week, but she is disliked by left wingers and pulled only small crowds. News reports said she was frequently shouted down.

Her picture on posters in the capital usually has its eyes or entire face scratched out.

Many Peronists say they believe Isabel, a 42-year-old former dancer and chorus girl who married Peron during the early stages of his 18-year exile, may prove a burden to her aging husband at the polls.

They profess shock at the idea of an ex-chorus girl succeeding as president if her husband dies in office. They say her nomination may prove a political mistake.

EXPRESS LITTLE DOUBT

But no one doubts that Peron, who reaches his 78th birthday two weeks after the elections, will win his third term as president of Argentina.

Peron is hoping for at least 60 per cent of the vote Sunday when just over 14 million Argentines go to the polls. Anything less, his supporters fear, would damage his image as "the savior of the fatherland" and seriously weaken his hand in attempting to restore unity to Argentines.

Five smaller parties among the nine who presented candidates in the first elections last March have withdrawn from the present race, some of them announcing their backing for the Peronists.

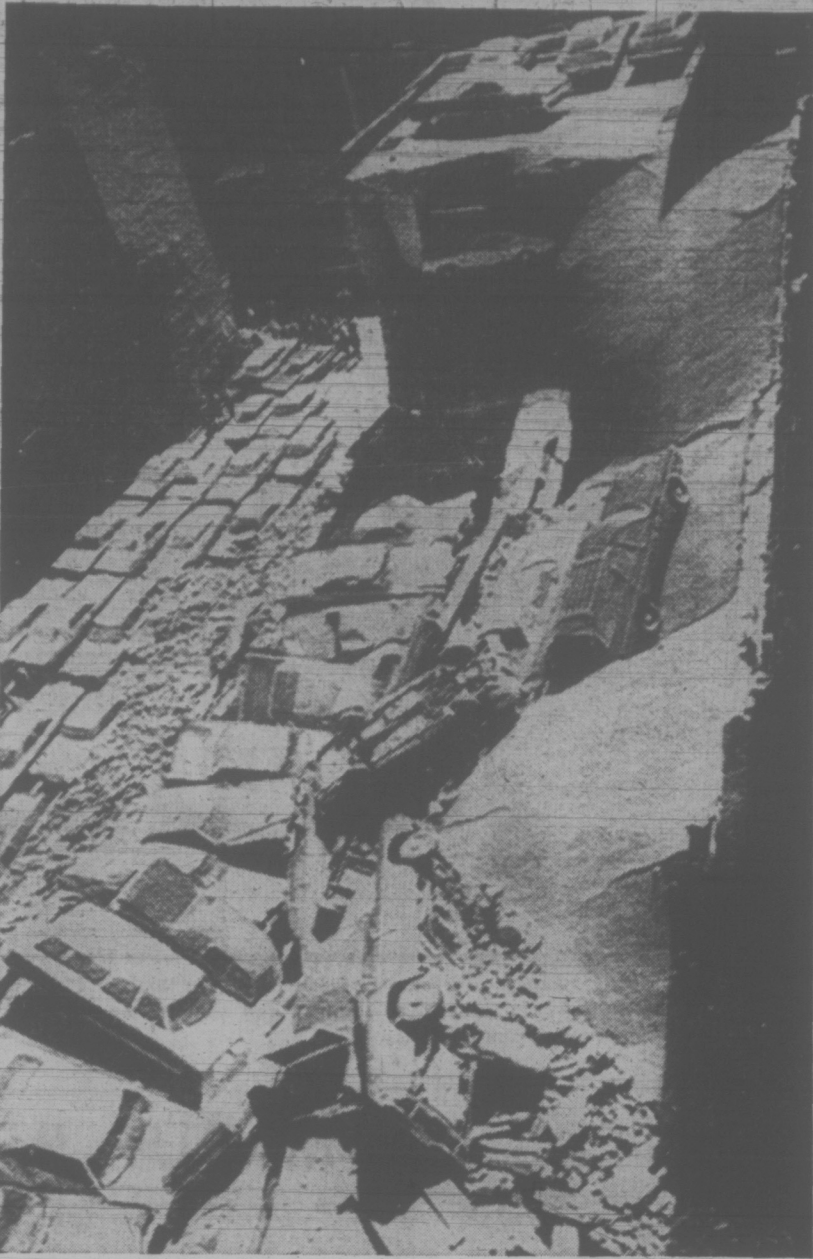

This may ensure Peron a larger majority than the 49.56 per cent won by his political stand-in Hector Campora in March, unless he suffers large-scale desertions from the left wing of the Peronist movement.

'Light Spill' At Nanos Bay

NANAIMO — A "very, very light" diesel oil spill occurred in Nanos Bay near here Wednesday night but no damage was done and it has "practically dispersed," district supervisor of fisheries Bill Winsby said today.

Source of the light diesel oil is not known but possibly came from a vessel outside the bay, he said. The spill was originally 50 yards wide and 400 yards long.

"It's of no concern to us," said Winsby, adding that no damage was done, "not a bit."

RICHLAND, Wash. (AP) — Nobody can come up with a new excuse for speeding, police often say.

But a Kennewick, Wash., woman serving a work-release jail sentence may have found a clincher.

She's in jail from 11 p.m. to 8 a.m. five nights a week. A Richland, Wash., officer stopped her Tuesday and told her she was going 20 miles an hour over the limit.

"I was late for jail," she said.

WORKS PLAN PAYS BONUS

REGINA (CP) — Municipalities will be paid a bonus for employing persons on welfare under the 1973-74 winter works program, Saskatchewan Premier Allan Blakeney said Wednesday.

The limit on the provincial share of project costs would be 60 per cent, up from 50, and a $25-a-week bonus would be paid for each man hired who had previously been receiving payments under the Saskatchewan Assistance Plan and was referred by the welfare office.

Hotel Blasted

Times News Services

BELFAST — A double explosion demolished a hotel in the County Tyrone border town of Strabane today, but caused no injuries, the army said.

An army spokesman said the two bombs were planted by a pair of armed teenagers, who gave the hotel staff 15 minutes to flee.

Meanwhile in London, Prime Minister Heath said unequivocally Wednesday night that he does not favor the integration of Northern Ireland with the rest of Britain.

A furore which broke out when Heath hinted Tuesday that integration might become necessary was only slightly reduced by milder comments made by the British leader later.

Heath stated Wednesday: "I have never sought, nor do I now seek, to advocate the integration of Northern Ireland into the United Kingdom..."

10-Year 'Comeback' Planned on Houses

REGINA (CP) — The federal cabinet and the housebuilding industry are studying a proposal that would give homeowners 10 years of insurance against structural defects in new houses, the president of the Housing and Urban Development Association of Canada said Wednesday.

Keith Morley of Toronto, association president, told a news conference that Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. has approved the proposal.

Under the proposal, an independent council of professionals, building trades consumers and other groups would administer the insurance program.

A builder would register the house he is building and if it met minimum construction standards, it would be certified. The builder's technical and financial capabilities would also be examined.

For the first year, the builder would be responsible for correcting defects.

For the next four years, the council would provide insurance at no cost to the homeowner. The cost of insurance would be built into the cost of the house.

The consumer would then have the option of buying insurance for another five years.

Morley said the aim of the proposal is to give house buyers more confidence, to limit frivolous complaints and to eliminate fly-by-night operators who don't want to face complaints.

If a homeowner wanted to complain about an alleged defect, the council would provide a conciliator who would take the matter up with the builder.

The homeowner would be charged a fee for the conciliator's services, but the fee would be refunded if the complaint was not a nuisance claim.

If the conciliator could not resolve the problem, the council would appoint an arbitrator whose decision would be binding.

There would be a $50-deductible provision in the insurance and should the builder go bankrupt, the council would protect the homeowner's investment for one year.

Plane Search Resumed

The search for a light plane missing on a flight to Terrace from Quesnel resumed today after being hampered Wednesday by poor weather.

The search, co-ordinated in Prince George, is being carried out over 400 miles of heavily wooded wilderness separating the two interior communities.

An experienced CP Air pilot, Neil Carey, 46, of Vancouver is believed to be the sole occupant of the plane, a Stinson 108.

The Basic Principles

The latest published study of the Central Area of Victoria, comprising what is commonly known as the downtown area or the central core, contains a wealth of sound observation and enlightened guidelines. Produced by city planner G. J. Greenhalgh and staff, with Mr. H. Spence-Sales as consultant, the 32-page illustrated booklet competently sums up the type of development which should prevail in the downtown area and the ways in which it can be achieved.

The basic philosophy of the approach is that the present business district should remain the principal business centre of the city, and that to maintain this situation there should be encouragement of residential construction within the core—as recommended, for instance, in the Old Town concept—and that this construction of new buildings and rehabilitation of worthy existing ones should be carried out in a style and on a scale to preserve the best features of Victoria's appearance.

That is an excellent basis on which to proceed, and the present and future city councils will do well to follow the theme. Encouragement of a population-downtown will lessen the pressure on the present residential areas of the city, and so help to preserve their flavor against the total encroachment of standard apartment boxes or high-rise constructions.

In its conclusions the study points out that we cannot stress too strongly "the vital private role in the future of Downtown—people employed Downtown using an improved transit system, people shopping Downtown, shop owners with a positive outlook and friendly service, developers with an appreciation of long-term objectives for a distinctive and human scale environment."

There are such perceptive comments as "Downtown has an impressive heritage of buildings of a past era, and an excellent opportunity exists for a subtle mixture of the old and the new. It is essential to establish confidence in the future as there are a few key decisions, out of the hands of the City, that could tip the balance from an exciting and prosperous future to one of decline and obsolescence."

We are reminded of the importance of the provincial government's heavy influence on the city's growth, both existing and potential. The obvious need is summed up in the guideline that "close co-operation should be sought between the city and the province in developing a plan for new government offices."

There are other important comments. "A separate pedestrian system should be endorsed as an objective for central area development." "A balanced transportation system should be provided for local, regional and inter-city transportation adequate to meet community objectives." "Development should be in keeping with existing standards of height, bulk and spacing to enhance Victoria's physical character." "Rehabilitation of buildings of special interest should be encouraged to enhance Victoria's distinctive character, and new construction should be in scale with and complementary to the present city centre."

Following such principles a commendable plan of development for Victoria has a great chance of success. The study is a very promising one and should mark a very definite forward step in Victoria's development.

Big Shortages Equal Little Cars

Not very long ago automobile manufacturers sold new models on the basis of length. "The bigger the better" seemed to be the thrust of all advertising. But gasoline shortages and prices have combined to scale down the giants. One auto magazine reports that sales of larger cars fell another 2.72 per cent in May, leaving the big models with only 29.21 per cent of the current U.S. market.

If the trend becomes the standard, small cars could have some beneficial effects on our cities. More available parking would be an obvious result. Both fuel and metal supplies would also benefit. But North Americans, conditioned these many years to equate size with quality, may have difficulty squeezing their overfed bodies and egos into small cars. If we keep consuming our natural resources at the current rate, however, little cars may look like a Godsend as we are forced by shortages to walk off all those accumulated pounds of flesh and ego.

A Look at the Multinationals

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. — Why should PepsiCo, the giant American multinational parent company whose most famous product is the Pepsi soft drink, be able to sell cyclamates abroad when they are already banned as dangerous in the United States?

Or why, for that matter, should General Motors not recall autos in Australia, when similar defective models were recalled in the U.S.?

The questions were being voiced by Ralph Nader, the American consumer advocate. Only, this time he was going global, firing his guns at the multinational companies whose operations are being studied by a special United Nations committee.

The problems faced by "consumerism" in dealing with large international firms was only one aspect of the issues raised as the committee held its first public hearings here last week. The larger issue of the accountability of these supercompanies, their effect on the economies of the countries where they operate, and the danger of interference in domestic political affairs was given topical significance by the coup in Chile.

Outside Interference

It was that strife-torn South American nation which in June 1972 urged the creation of a special UN body to deal with multinationals, when it was revealed that the International Telephone and Telegraph Corporation had tried to block the election of President Allende three years ago.

A Chilean economist, professor Osvaldo Sunkel, evoked a brief dramatic moment at the hearings when he declared that the "Chilean drama" demonstrated why poorer countries feared the industrialized powers and their influential corporations.

"The government of President Allende made an attempt at changing the structure of under-development and dependence," noted professor Sunkel. "The conclusion for us here seems to be that it is not possible to try to restructure relations of dependence between underdeveloped countries and the transnational capitalist systems in a peaceful way."

The Chilean professor, who is known to some economists as sympathetic but sometimes critical of President Allende's politics, heatedly disputed testimony by corporate officers that their concerns had contributed to the health and welfare of the countries where they operated.

Yet, the differences between the multinationals and their host countries are hardly ever as clear-cut as the case of Chile and the flagrant interference of I.T.T. Nor do these host nations always view these companies as threats to their sovereignty, as the active search for foreign investment and industrial expansion in many countries—including Canada and most particularly its poorer provinces—points out.

"There is a tendency to overplay the ability of the multinational company to escape, if you will, national jurisdiction and control," testified Jacques Maisonneuve, president of IBM World Trade Corporation. His organization is building a new manufacturing plant in Quebec, its third Canadian location.

The same theme was picked up by a half dozen other corporate executives, representing such firms as EXXON, General Motors, and Pfizer Chemicals.

"It should be clear that these corporations exist at the will of the state and their activities are governed by the laws, policies and customs of the countries in which they operated and by the consumers they serve," noted Thomas A. Murphy, vice-chairman of General Motors.

I.T.T. was not represented at the hearings, and it was evident that many of the corporate spokesmen were embarrassed by that supercompany's political escapades. Despite the assurance of the committee chairman, L. K. Jha of India, that "no one is in the dark," some of the ate international action, are the challenge faced by the special UN group.

Impressively titled the Committee of Eminent Persons, it is composed of 20 top-flight businessmen and economists from around the world and representing various shades of political opinion. Canada is represented by Dr. John Deutsch, principal and vice-chancellor of Queens University and former head of the Economic Council of Canada.

The committee held three days of public hearings last week, and will hold further public meetings in Geneva to supplement its private discussions. It plans to issue its recommendations to the United Nations next summer.

A staff report prepared for the discussions suggests the desirability of some system of "international accountability" for multinational companies, and the corporate spokesmen—not surprisingly—were unwilling to embrace the idea. However, in varying degrees, all saw some areas for possible United Nations action.

Mr. Maisonneuve of IBM said a proposal for a code of conduct for multinationals—made in the staff study—would be difficult but worth pursuing. He suggested it should emphasize greater employment of foreign nationals, especially on directors' boards, adding that this is IBM policy. All the Americans working abroad for his company could be flown back in a single aircraft—providing it was a Boeing 747, he said, evoking laughter.

Investment Agreement

Mr. Murphy of GM said that the time might be ripe for an international agreement on foreign investment, similar to the trading arrangements of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade. Strongly opposed to this view was John J. Powers, honorary chairman of Pfizer.

"In my view this is an attempt to do too much too soon. For this reason I believe it would fail and we would have lost ground," he said.

There was also considerable interest from the company spokesmen for a rationalization of the taxation of multinationals. Another suggestion, from a vice-president of EXXON, was for a voluntary code of conduct which would discourage some corporations from activities which create ill-will.

However, Mr. Murphy noted that the events of the last quarter century do not lead to optimism about what the United Nations can accomplish in controlling or even co-ordinating the activities of these super-companies.

Dr. Deutsch, the Canadian representative, said in an interview that the most important role of the UN committee may be "educational." At this early stage, the Queens University principal is uncertain about what the committee can accomplish, although he believes it will almost certainly conceptualize the issues.

The diversity of the testimony heard by the committee at its first public hearings underlines the challenge facing the United Nations.

"... all right now ... these are for depression when you think of Chile and the world in general ... and these are to calm your elation over Trudeau and the swallows' nest over your garage door ... I've labelled them to avoid confusion ... okay ... ?"

LETTERS FROM OUR READERS

Remembered

My husband and I were on Vancouver Island when the ferry boats went on strike.

We would like to express to the members of the Police Department and employees of the Black Ball Ferry our appreciation for the courtesy and understanding extended to us. Our list of "thank you" could be expanded to include many other people in Victoria.

If we ever have to be stranded again for three days we hope it will be in your friendly city. — Mrs. Ralph Card, 421 Webster Street, Manchester, New Hampshire, U.S.A.

Far and Near

Chile Has Fallen, Allende Is Dead! I wonder how many people paused for a moment in sorrow for this latest tragedy. Another, freely democratically elected Government plowed under by right wing militarists. The list is endless. Greece, Santo Domingo, Vietnam, Korea, Indonesia, Cambodia, Laos and now Chile, and always the hand of the great arsenal of democracy, the U.S.A. is present.

America opposes communism (or socialism) because they are (she claims) "for the armed overthrow of legal governments." The terrible irony of it all is precisely the opposite. If Allende had used the methods advocated by the C.I.A. and had as ruthlessly suppressed the military and opposition, as they so murderously opposed him, he and his government would still be alive today.

President Bosche of Santa Domingo said, when the U.S. and the military rebels overthrew his government — "America has this day caused more of my people to become communists than Russia ever could have hoped to achieve."

I wonder how many days now before America recognizes the new illegal military junta in Chile, and the I. T. and T. is firmly back in the saddle!

"Why," I used to ask many Americans, "is America so opposed to revolution in other countries when she claimed this God-given right for herself in 1776?" "Ah!" would come back the reply. "that's because England was across the sea." This specious type of logic gave rise to a small epigram which I call "1776 and all that."

If the measure of the legality of revolution

Is yarded by nautical miles

Why therefore deny

Statute miles?

I would like to express my sorrow for Chile and my admiration for Allende's brave struggle. — Monte Vanton, 4351 Gordon Head Rd.

For Hunting

It seems that neither J. C. Ingram Rogers, nor any other anti-hunting group has given much thought to "hunting in East Sooke Park". The Provincial Fish and Wildlife Branch has allowed hunting in the Park from September 30 to February 10. September 30 is the beginning of the rainy season and after it starts the park will feel the feet of very few nature lovers on its trails. The humidity hangs around 100 per cent during this time of the year and the park will see most of Victoria's armchair adventurers at home reading stories about the joys of winter hiking.

Hunting is essential in an area where nearby logging has permitted a "relatively" large population of game. If a percentage of the population is not harvested each year it will increase to the point where the resultant overpopulation will cause over-browsing and starvation. This is undesirable for three reasons.

(1) Over browsing destroys the vegetation in winter ranges, which is compounded each winter; (2) Death of game by starvation is a loss of a valuable food supply to the hunter; and (3) high population numbers of prey attract high population numbers of predators. In this case the cougar. (Try relaxing "secure in the knowledge" that a cougar will maul your youngster after he has digested your dog). I would much rather walk in an area that has 100 hungry hunters than over the same area populated by 10 hungry cougars.

Despite all arguments, there is an acceptable solution to this problem. The Park should remain open to hunting by longbow only. This would solve several problems as well as being a compromise between hunter and naturalist. Many Victoria archers are seeking an area close by (not north of Gold River) where they are able to relax "secure in the knowledge" that no rifle is going to disturb their quarry or be pointed at their mottled green and brown clothing. Bagging an animal with a bow requires considerable skill in both handling equipment and stalking game and therefore rarely results in game population over-kill. (Since there are as many skillful bow hunters as there are winter hikers). The numbers of animals harvested would be enough to keep winter starvation, predators and winter range destruction to optimum levels.

Another point of interest for J. C. Ingram Rogers. There are thousands of acres of land on Vancouver Island open to hikers. They may be minus park facilities such as wide trails, flagging tape, picnic tables, outhouses, parking lots, asphalt, signs pointing out the obvious, and pressurized water, but they are there to enjoy. There is no reason to allow East Sooke Park to be for hikers only. — K. W. Dwernychuk, 3163 Carroll St.

Chile

I have always read with great interest and I may say enjoyment the articles which are written by Jack Scott. I feel that Jack brings to his articles his wide experience in foreign lands and his article, "A death in Santiago and a hope dies too," is, in my view, one of the finest articles I have read in many years.

As one who spent some 28 happy years in Latin America I feel that the death of Salvador Allende is a tragedy of world importance. Here was a man who was attempting to solve the well-known injustices of most of the Latin American countries by democratic means. However I never thought that he would succeed or survive, as the cards of the privileged few, the hierarchy of the Church and the interests of U.S. and other foreign big business were stacked against him.

There is little I can add to the magnificent article by Jack Scott except:

(1) The officers of the Chilean Armed Forces are, of course, drawn from the families of the privileged few and so would be against any reforms.

(2) It was reported that the U.S. had in recent months supplied twice as much money for arms purchases as the money supplied to try and better the lot of the average Chilean. Why these Latin American countries should support large armed forces equipped with tanks, jet aircraft etc. has always been a puzzle to me. Who are they going to fight? Of course the answer is that the armed forces are maintained to perpetuate the status quo of privilege for the very few and misery for the majority.

The U.S. in spite of all its power, will be unable to maintain this state of affairs and violent revolution, the only other solution, will erupt as sure as the sun will rise tomorrow. I am very much in favour of evolution and not revolution but when one sees the tragedy of a very fine man like Allende perhaps violent revolution is the only solution. However there will be smiling faces in the boardrooms of I.T.T. and other giant U.S. corporations. To me it is most tragic. — M. P. B. Wrixon, 1680 Poplar Avenue.

Life

As there is much open discussion in the papers concerning abortion it is appropriate that true meaning be given to the great creative force to bring forth life.

This creative power was given to human beings as a priceless gift to be used to build within a body of the divine image and like unto the primal one.

Man in his pride and arrogance has used it to further his own vanity and self-indulgence. The church has claimed celibacy as its governing principal and yet has encouraged the production of millions and millions of unwanted children and millions of women dead from excessive giving of birth.

They have preached morality and marriage as a solution, but never have they proclaimed that the true purpose of this great life force is to put it under the direction of the supreme creator so that it may be used to build within a spiritual body free from corruption.

Each person is given this creative life force to give birth to this divine image or spiritual body.

When individual persons within themselves accept this they will begin to move in the right direction and all questions of abortion will be answered by the voice of inner wisdom and all discussions concerning abortion will be unnecessary. — Margaret Parry, 662 St. Patrick St.

60 YEARS AGO

From the Times of September 20, 1913

After many years of service on the Fraser River, tending to the needs of settlers along the banks of that wonderful artery, the CPR river steamer Beaver is to be withdrawn from the New Westminster-Chilliwack service for all time, according to an announcement made this morning by officials of the company. The iron horse is the cause of the disappearance from the Fraser of this faithful old craft. Since the British Columbia Electric Railway started its service between Vancouver, New Westminster and Chilliwack, the business which fell to the lot of the Beaver was very small and finally the traffic dwindled down until it did not pay the CPR to maintain the service.

TORIES LEAVE LIMP IMPRESSION

Some Doubts About Stanfield

OTTAWA — The brutal question is floating again with brooders on partisan politics. It's because the Trudeau government seems safe from a defeat and a subsequent election, at least until the early spring.

The question is about Robert Stanfield. Is he incompetent as the leader of an official Opposition?

Doubts about party leaders are always a staple of Ottawa political conversations. Who's up? Who's down? Who's a heart attack away? The question about Mr. Stanfield was first posed firmly in February, 1968 when he seemed to dribble away an initiative created by an unexpected defeat of the Pearson government in the House.

It disappeared last October when the Stanfield Conservatives did much better than expected, missing government and the largest total of members in the House by a few hundred votes in a few ridings.

It is my understanding that in the late spring Mr. Stanfield himself canvassed with a few close associates whether a successor might move the party further, faster. He did not do this to stroke out dissidents or to spark loyalty and confidence. He's not that self-regarding a man.

After some brief toying with alternatives — basically, Peter Lougheed and Claude Wagner — the canvass was dropped. The alternatives seemed no better and the timing problems were bad.

'Such a Nice Guy'

The resurfacing doubts occur even to Liberals and New Democrats. One Liberal with 10 years in the House and six in the ministry summed it nicely for me the other day: "We're fortunate Stanfield is such a nice guy, so slow on the take, so short on nastiness. What we need to be sensitive about is the NDP distaste for an election. Right? We mustn't drive them into the box where they must vote with the Tories on a confidence motion."

A short summation of NDP attitudes might begin with approval of the acuteness in Jean Marchand's remarks about the so-called Liberal-NDP alliance. It's not a marriage. The uncomfortable alliance will sunder as soon as either party sees advantage in the sundering.

By DOUGLAS FISHER

Mr. Stanfield and the Conservatives figure high in NDP calculations of the alliance. So long as he fails to come on strongly, personally or in policy terms, their consciences and their "black or white" choice are rather easy.

Conservatives tend to divert from a critical examination of Mr. Stanfield with the Dalton Camp appreciation made several years ago, or they fail to realize or don't want to consider the limp or lightweight or fragmented impression they give as a party and as a caucus.

For example, the other day Eldon Woolliams, the veteran Tory MP from Calgary, reiterated the Camp judgment to me in this form: "Bob will make a wonderful prime minister. Once in he'll be there for a long time. He'll be much better at governing than in opposition."

Of course, Mr. Stanfield's potential as prime minister may never be realized. There has been a government to defeat since last January. Despite an indifferent, if not shaky, performance, it seems less vulnerable now than it was then.

It is on this matter of Mr. Stanfield as a fine prime minister that my doubts are growing. Such doubts do not arise from any warmth towards, or cherishing of, the present government nor from any expectation what Mr. Stanfield should be as leader of the official Opposition, what his talents and personality preclude — that is, a dexterous knifer, a master of ridicule and the clever obstructions such as the Liberals, with Plekergill, Martin, and Chevrier, demonstrated in 1962 and 1963 when they destroyed the Diefenbaker minority government.

Cosmetic Change

Ask this question: What differences would there really be in Ottawa if the Liberals and Conservatives switched chairs?

The longer one knows federal Ottawa the more one appreciates the stability and power of the permanent administration.

In fairness and in candor the case seems there that a change to a Stanfield government would be mere cosmetic ics, that almost immediately the new government would be McCarthy's to the continuing administration's Edgar Bergens.

The Conservatives in opposition remain a party with three different economic spokesmen. The rather excellent, individual capacities of the caucus as constituency zealots continue strongly and, in doing so, accentuate the incoherence and contradictions implicit in all the diversity of the country.

In the summer recess, it was not just most of the cabinet who "flaked out". So did the official Opposition.

It's warming to forecast that a man will be a great prime minister. The best augury for it would be strong indications that the man with the potential was both clear and precise about what he was going to do with the power, and much more explicit than he has been about the major figures in his cast who will execute the designs.

At this time, a change in government seems more like musical chairs. At least, the Liberals, after 10 years in power, have some internal critics of the inertia and blandness of the continuing administration.

What kind of a PM?

The Weak Beer Called Hockey

THE GLOBE AND MAIL
An Editorial

If a man hoped for a buzz on the near-beer of Prohibition days, he set out to swirl gallons of the stuff and even then the odds of him getting anything more than blotto and a pair of tired kidneys were slim. Beer it really wasn't. It had an alcohol content of something like two-and-a-half per cent compared to the content in today's Canadian beer of 5 per cent. All that could be said in its favor was that it was legal.

So is the National Hockey League.

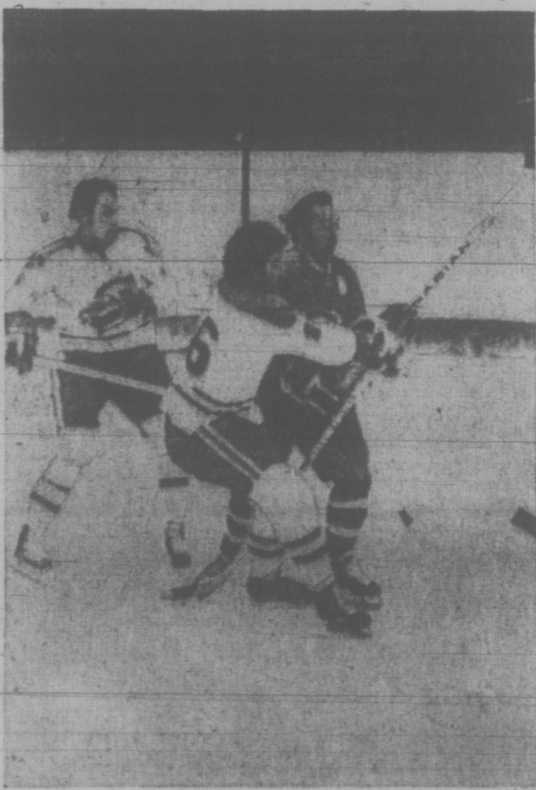

Yet in less than 10 years, NHL president Clarence Campbell and the league's board of governors — with, granted, plenty of help from the Interlocking World Hockey Association — have succeeded in taking the cream of professional hockey in North America and trying to near-beer it into water. Not into poverty; no, gracious no, not that. They've been careful to tamper only with the quality of their product — a product that could once be proudly called a public institution — not the profits it makes.

Until 1967, there were only six NHL clubs. They sat on an Olympian peak above a solid, talent-developing source of minor professional and top-flight amateur teams across Canada and the United States.

For a player, the route into the league was narrow; only the very best made it. For the public, it meant only the very best hockey performances of superb athletic skill. At any time through the season, well worth the price of admission.

It's a tale for one's grandchildren. Capitalism — never sleeps — in the pro-hockey business, it doesn't even catnap. Six teams made a lot of money. So why not 12 teams, 18 teams, 24 teams... right up to the 33 teams that will now carry a so-called major professional label when the 1976-77 season opens: 13 to date in the WHA; 20 under the most recent expansion of the NHL.

And, oh, how the money rolls in. Clubs have been raising their ticket prices — Boston Bruins, the latest — up 50 cents. The cost of a franchise for NHL teams in the latest expansion will be $6-million. Charles O. Finley may well have lost more than a million since 1970 when he paid $4.5-million for the California Golden Seals. But the NHL governors, who more than most men know where a dollar lies and who want to take the Seals' franchise off Mr. Finley's hands and re-sell it to a more economically stable management, had little trouble agreeing to his asking price of $6.5-million. The deal only fell through, reportedly, because they wouldn't pay it all at once.

And where will the players come from? All, really, from the same source that fed the pre-1967 NHL, plus a handful from more hockey-active U.S. colleges. Only instead of maybe three or four members of, say, the Toronto Marlboros making it into the major professional leagues, they'll likely all make it. And the minor-pro teams will simply be whittled away as more and more of them are replaced by the major professional clubs. The NHL, in 1967 when the first expansion came, agreed under pressure from Parliament not to draft an amateur until he was 20. The WHA, which came later, is drafting teen-agers. Now the NHL, scrambling for players to fill all its berths, made no such agreement and says it will reconsider.

Dilution upon dilution. We trust that by the time the first peewee toddler debuts on Hockey Night in Canada, the sports-loving public will have taken its money somewhere else.

Kick Your Legs Faster, Natalie

By COLMAN MCCARTHY

Little Natalie, age six, frizzy-haired and wearing a tiny swimsuit like an Olympic swimmer's, splashed into the pool. The air steamed with heat and like everyone in for a weekend dip, little Natalie took eagerly to her aquatic frolic.

"Swim, Natalie. Begin your swimming."

It was Natalie's mother. She was plopped in a deck chair a few feet from poolside at the shallow end, within barking distance of her daughter. She came with a towel that was placed under her feet, a thick book to read was in her lap, along with a jumbo container of greasy slop-on that is guaranteed to give you a tan, rain or shine.

Natalie's mother began splashing the folds of her flesh with the goo but she kept a beam on Natalie.

"Swim. Start to swim, darling. Let's see your breast stroke. Do a back stroke. Go ahead."

Natalie went ahead. But then she switched from swimming to splashing, with little lost in translation. But mother wouldn't allow it.

"Natalie, I said swim. You're not swimming. You're splashing. Kik! kik! kik! faster. Co-ordinate your arms. Go forward. Try again."

Natalie tried again. She dove forward. Her head went under for a brief moment and her four limbs moved in a full spurt of disjointed energy. But she went nowhere; in 10 seconds, she covered about a foot.

Mama sprang up. She came to the poolside.

"That's awful," she shouted. "You're not swimming. You're six years old. Other kids your age can swim. You should be able to swim from one side of the pool to the other. But you can't. You just aren't kicking your legs the right way. And your arms. Natalie, move them like this."

Mama then demonstrated, one arm out, the other back, both in strong paddle-wheel arcs that would have propelled the Delta Queen up the Mississippi.

Natalie never did swim that day, nor any other on which I saw her at the pool.

It was not that she didn't like the water. She did. What she couldn't take was her mother — the Swimming Coach, forever hovering, always assertive and wheedling, never content that her kid was only a healthy, adorable and playful youngster, and never able to say who cares if Natalie doesn't learn to swim this year.

Natalie assuredly didn't care. She came to the pool to play and to let the summer breezes blow, not for a cram course in basic skills-and-drills. Many days, I would watch little Natalie leave the pool at afternoon's end, trailing dejectedly behind her General Patton mama, a dispirited child not allowed to be playful.

There is no telling how many Natasies we have in America but it is easy to come upon them. Their mothers, and sometimes fathers, run high with fevers of impatience and refuse to let their children be child-like. Instead, the kids must become emblems, advertisements of superiority because indeed Mama or Papa is also a superior product.

It is normal for a parent to have expectations for his children and be disappointed when downward adjustments need to be made. But instead of lowering the aspirations and adjusting to stars within easier grasp, the pressure of expectations is increased. "Swim, Natalie, start to swim." Has Mama ever thought of approaching her future Olympic freestyle champion with perhaps the statement, "Enjoy the water, dear I'm going to sit here and enjoy watching you."

This implies that the child is a citizen of the free world, not the forced world. But dictator parents like the latter: Natalie has to swim, she has to learn how to read (at age three, not a minute later), she has to discover how to pump on the swing by herself. The child is never allowed a free fall into these skills, on the same notion that once she's done it awhile she will master it on her own.

In The Real Teachers (Random House, New York), the author Philip Sterling interviews a seasoned Bronx school teacher, Belle Scheckner, and asks how she judges whether her children are progressing.

"If you mean achievement levels and so forth, above or below grade," said Mrs. Scheckner, "I don't know and I don't care. I try to evaluate their growth as human beings, how much the concepts we discuss, the books we read, the social institutions we've experienced in the classroom — how these have really seeped into their lives, not only in school but outside, too."

"What do I do when I see a child isn't progressing? One thing I don't often do is call the parents in. In the main, the kids with the greatest problems are those whose parents have great problems."

The difficulty in watching Natalie have her day ruined by her beastly mother (actually the beasts of the wild have a natural tolerance of their offspring's developmental tempo) is that one can only look on passively at the harassment.

It is a form of child abuse, yet it does not fit into the category that will see an estimated 50,000 children die in 1973 and 300,000 permanently injured because of battering parents. What Natalie's mother does to her is acceptable violence — the psyche can be punched and stomped and no black-and-blue mark ever be found — a type that is well integrated into our popular culture.

It is a useless integration, though. In such places of play as the pool or the backyard, when kids are left to themselves they fulfill the notion of Carl Jung: "Life proceeds by making use of natural physical and chemical conditions as a means to its own existence."

To understand the mothers of the nation's Natasies is also crucial. In recent years, the unimaginable has happened: young mothers have been pressured into strained anxiety over whether or not their kids are normal, whether too much discipline will repress junior and make him neurotic 20 years hence or whether too little discipline will produce another soldier for the devil's army.

Regardless of what a mother does with her young, there is someone to make her feel guilty. If she goes out to work, she is "abandoning" her children to the day care centre; if she stays home, she is "smothering" her children's creativity.

Such a state is inevitable in a country where the method of living often becomes more important than the content. "Actually," Jung believed, "it is the parents' lives that educate the child; what they add by word and gesture at best only serves to confuse him."

But words and gestures come easy — "Swim, Natalie, do it like this" — and values like gentleness and honesty are hard. There is also the optical illusion that gentleness and honesty produce nothing, and that only the person with the right method — "one arm out, Natalie, the other back" — gets to the other side of life's pool where all happiness and success await.

Occasionally, a rare mother is found who cares neither about the guilt feelings thrown at her nor the fact that her kids have been slow to learn the methods of success. Instead, she is committed to the notion — often held by her grandparents or aunts and uncles — that being is more crucial than doing; what I am influences the kids more than what I do.

It usually happens, unexpectedly for sure, that the best of life's swimmers — best meaning the ones who can choose independently what currents are worth going with — are the children of such dull but rooted parents.

Nuts to Retirement!

By RICHARD NEEDHAM

respectable otherwise, are heisting packets of meat and cans of tuna.

You might say, "Why don't they go on welfare?" But the law there says if you're on pension, you can't go on welfare. You might say, "Why don't they get a job?" But the law there severely limits the amount a pensioner may earn: after a certain point ($2,100) his pension gets reduced accordingly. I think this is wrong. The pension anybody gets is his, he has earned it. If he wants to increase it by working full or part time, good luck to him.

This limitation on earnings is also stupid. Any time I'm in Florida, the hotel and restaurant people bend my ear about the help problem; they can't get or keep staff. Yet all around them are men and women in their 60's and 70's who'd be delighted to have a paycheck. The same thing, of course, applies in Canada. Pensioners should be able to take any job they like without being penalized for it.

My viewpoint on this is very clear. Everybody should have the right to work from the time they're 14 to the time they die. One reason, as noted above, is the continuous rise in prices. Since it has been going on for some 60 years (during my lifetime the dollar has lost 90 per cent of its value) I would expect it to continue for a while. Another reason is that we cannot afford to have a vast army of old people — and young people — just sitting around, staring vacantly into space. (The enormous amount we spend to keep young and old in idleness is of course one of the major reasons for the dollar's depreciation.)

A third reason is the loneliness, the boredom, that so often go with retirement. The guy at Ford or Massey-Ferguson may think it'll be great when he no longer has to get up and go to work.

But much as he may detest his job, he'll miss the companionship that goes with it. He'll miss the feeling of having something to do each day, even if it's something he dislikes. Yet again — you may screech at me for this — I think that man was intended to be a working animal, a striver and an achiever, for all of his life, the hell with rocking chairs and shuffleboards.

Finally, there are the medical advances which keep pushing back old age. In Shakespeare's time, you were old at 40. Now you're old when? According to most pension planning, a woman is too old to work at 60, a man at 65. Bah, humbug! Some people are worn out at those ages, let them retire and grow zinnias. But most people, I think, then come into their prime. They've had lots of experience, they know how to work (which the young do not), they have or should have got rid of their emotional problems, so let them pitch in there and do work that needs to be done.

You may recall that dear old Frank Sinatra gave his "final" retirement concert two years ago, when he was 55. But now he's back on stage — not because he needs the money, but because, in his own words, "It wasn't all that I thought it would be. It wasn't enough." Right on, Frankie baby, and that's why I haven't the slightest intention (crossing my fingers) of ever retiring on pension. My hope is to work till I drop; and if I do it in the same style as Bertrand Russell, I've got 37 great years to go. Whee!

Route 4 to Sea Was Clear, Time to Pick Up the Dead

By H. D. S. GREENWAY
ANG SNOUL, Cambodia (WP) — After three weeks of fighting, Route 4 to the sea was cleared of insurgents Tuesday and Wednesday. Just off the road, the government soldiers were sitting around in the ruins of the Kruos Pagoda burning bits of bodies.

First the government troops, then the insurgents had occupied the pagoda. On Wednesday, it stood a tall ruin — its curving roof and red tiles punctured by a hundred shells — stark and white against a darkening, rain-swollen sky.

The trees were shattered, their leaves beginning to die, and all about lay empty cartridges, grenades, shell fragments and the remains of men blown to pieces.

The living had built a little charcoal fire to burn what they could pick up of the dead. Bits of skulls could be seen among the coals. Nearby, the pelvis of a man lay severed at the belt, two white thigh bones sticking from blood-soaked trousers. The soldiers said they could not tell which were the enemy and which were their own, and the smell was very bad.

Some of the soldiers were cooking their supper in a corner of the pagoda yard. They said that the fighting had been very heavy here and that many soldiers had been killed and wounded trying to open the road. One could see the trench lines and bunker complexes which the insurgents had dug on both sides of the road to keep it cut, and the road itself was pocked with shell holes.

Outside the pagoda, the insurgents had had to dig their bunkers into the rice paddy dikes because the paddies were flooded at this time of year. But pagodas always stand on high ground, well-built and solid. They make excellent positions from which to fight off an approaching enemy; all over the country, the fighting often has centred on pagodas like this one.

It is the insurgents' tactic to hold positions like these as long as they can and then to fade away in the night, taking their dead and wounded with them whenever possible. The soldiers said that this battle was no exception; when the final assault was made, the soldiers found the enemy gone.

For the first time in three weeks Wednesday, traffic was moving all along the road. And the first truck convoys up from the sea already have reached Phnom Penh.

At one point, just east of here, traffic was held up Wednesday afternoon as a government ammunition dump burned and roared with exploding bombs and bullets for over an hour, showering the road with shrapnel. No one could say for sure how the fire had started, but the soldiers hid behind the ruins of a small building as the dump blazed away, sending ordinance fragments whistling through the air.

Some of the soldiers were paid Wednesday and one of them, blind in one eye, walked down the middle of the road gesticulating at the traffic saying, "don't go on, my brothers, don't go on. His comrades laughed and waved the cars on, saying he was either mad or drunk.

Route 4 to the sea was clear Wednesday and the war has moved on elsewhere. There was time to pick up the dead. But the soldiers know that this road has been cut countless times in the last 3½ years and that the war will pass this way again.

Japan Cuts Off Korea Aid Until Kidnapping Settled

TOKYO (WP) — Japan will not approve further economic aid to South Korea until the Kim Dae-Jung kidnapping case is settled satisfactorily, official sources said Wednesday.

The Japanese decision followed receipt of a new report from Seoul denying that a Korean Embassy first secretary in Japan was involved in abducting the opposition political leader from a Tokyo hotel Aug. 8.

The continued Korean denial that first secretary Kim Dong-Woon was involved in the kidnap plot — despite fingerprints from the scene and other evidence cited by Japanese police — was termed unacceptable by police and other authorities here.

According to foreign ministry sources here, Japan will not hold a planned ministerial-level foreign aid meeting with the Republic of Korea government until the kidnap case is settled to the satisfaction of the Japanese government and public.

Perhaps more important, the officials said Japan currently is unlikely to approve necessary documents which permit disbursement of large sums of economic aid granted by agreement of the two countries last September.

In the ministerial meeting last fall, Japan agreed to extend foreign assistance loans totaling 52.4 billion yen, (about $200 million) to South Korea. Each of the loan projects requires an exchange of official notes for disbursement. So far, only 6.2 billion (B) yen ($24 million) has actually been disbursed.

There was no indication whether the Japanese manoeuvres would have much effect on the South Korean government of President Park Chung-Hee, which has been insisting despite police evidence and official statements here that no government operatives were involved in the politically sensitive kidnapping case.

The kidnapped opposition politician, who has been living in self-imposed exile in Japan and the United States since last October, was taken from a Tokyo hotel by a well-organized band of Korean-speaking men, bound, gagged and transported to Seoul against his will. He is under house arrest there.

The Korean Central Intelligence Agency, which had been pursuing Kim Dae-Jung for months, was immediately accused of the kidnapping by the politician's friends — but the government in Seoul has denied all charges that it was in any way involved.

Indian Brief Asks Government For New Deal in Province

The B.C. Association of Non-Status Indians presses for a new deal from the provincial government in a 130-page brief presented to Premier Dave Barrett and his cabinet today.

The brief, which deals with housing, education, economic development, development of the north and employment of non-status Indians, was presented by BCANSI president Fred House and 70 local presidents from all over B.C.

House described the brief as "work-oriented."

"We're not trying to get more Indians on the welfare rolls."

"We're trying to make it more possible for them to help themselves."

The meeting between the association and the government is the first ever held.

"This major brief... contains a number of programs, suggestions and requests which are designed to help lift our people out of their degradation of poverty and hopelessness and enable them to share in the growth and prosperity of this bountiful province," House said in the opening statement.

"We want a new deal for native people. There are about 65,000 of us in B.C. who are non-status Indians. Most of us are poor. Indeed, there isn't an ethnic or cultural group in the province which can lay claim to having such a large proportion of its members who are desperately poor."

"We are not requesting special treatment or special programs for our people. Rather, we are requesting government assistance to enable our people to achieve a measure of equality."

"We seek government help to enable us to rise up to the level of the average citizen."

The brief, culmination of several months' work by the executive of BCANSI, outlines a five-year plan to achieve "average citizen" goals.

Adequate housing is given top priority.

"Some of the shacks our people live in would not provide adequate shelter for an animal. It is hopeless to expect our people to progress as long as they live in huts and shacks that are unfit for human habitation," House said.

The brief recommends that a provincial housing authority be set up to develop programs and projects to improve housing for all citizens.

BCANSI also asks for government help in providing building lots on which the group's own non-profit housing company can build low-cost homes.

Education was listed as the second priority in the report.

"We urgently want our children to obtain from the school system what every child has a basic right to obtain—an education that will develop the potential in the child," House said.

Only five per cent of children with Indian ancestry in B.C. graduate from high school, House said. The provincial average for non-Indians is 60 per cent.

In the field of economic and social development, House said the association wants to get Indian people more involved "in the mainstream of the larger society."

The brief recommends that the economic plight of Indians in B.C. be given special consideration in federal-provincial agreements, and that funds be set aside by both governments for use by people of Indian ancestry.

Child, 8, Granted Bail

EDINBURGH (AP) — A Scottish high court judge Thursday ordered the release of an eight-year-old girl sentenced to 18 months detention for stabbing a playmate.

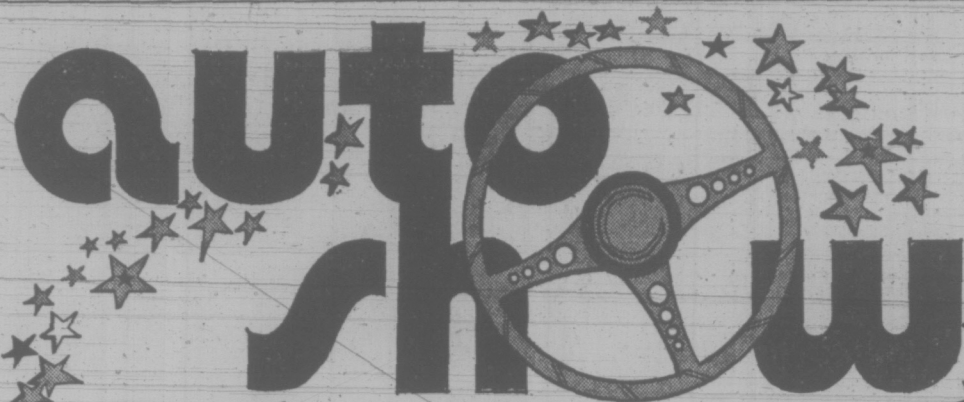

The girl, Mary Cairns of Barlanark in Glasgow, was freed on bail of one pound—about $2.50—so that she can return to her family while the sentence is appealed. She was not in court.

She has been staying at a special home for children in need of supervision after the detention order was imposed at Glasgow Sheriff Court earlier this week.

The severity of the sentence on so young a child raised a storm of protest in Britain. English lawyers pointed out no child under ten could be arraigned under English law which differs from the Scottish code and would in any case have been protected by anonymity.

Mary stabbed 11-year-old Morag Brown in the chest with a breadknife during a quarrel. The injured girl suffered a partially collapsed lung.

Scottish legal authorities said there was no possibility Mary would be held in a prison. They said the 18-month detention order could be shortened if her behavior was satisfactory.

Store Curbs Lauded

CALGARY (CP) — The Alberta Supreme Court decision ordering Canada Safeway Ltd. to slow down its domination of the food retail markets in Edmonton and Calgary was "a very positive step for the consumer," the chairman of the federal Food Prices Review Board said Wednesday.

The Alberta Supreme Court, hearing on monopoly charges Monday, ordered Safeway to practise uniform pricing and restricted the number of new stores it may open in these cities in the next six years.

"If this encourages competition it will set a precedent, and is a very positive step for the consumer," Beryl Plumptre told a news conference after meeting Premier Peter Lougheed of Alberta.

While in Vancouver Tuesday, Mrs. Plumptre said double-pricing is "rampant" in British Columbia. She said the situation in Alberta is better.

"It would seem so far stores are more disciplined in their practices and things are not as difficult for the consumer here as in B.C."

Centres in Trouble

WINNIPEG (CP) — The federal government failure to fully implement its $25 million program to help Indian and Metis friendship centres may force their closure, Lloyd Sutton, president of the National Association of Friendship Centres said Tuesday.

Sutton told a news conference the association seriously questions the five-year program, announced last June, for migrating native people and the criteria under which it operates.

Sutton said the 48 centres across Canada have received about $1.4 million for operating costs so far this fiscal year but many, in smaller centres have been forced to close for periods because of lack of money.

Route Change Urged

WINNIPEG (CP) — Manitoba Industry Minister Leonard Evans has asked the federal government to make two specific changes in its recently announced agreement on air routes with the United States.

In a telegram to Transport Minister Jean Marchand, Evans asked the agreement be revised to include a Winnipeg-Chicago route for a Canadian carrier effective immediately rather than in five years, and a Canadian carrier to provide competitive service between Winnipeg and Minneapolis, beginning immediately.

Power Hike Extended

EDMONTON (CP) — An interim 15 per cent utility rate increase previously granted Calgary Power Ltd. has been extended to the end of 1973, the Public Utilities Board announced Wednesday.

The PUB granted the increase last April after hearings in January.

The board also said it has granted the company a rate of return of 7.65 per cent instead of the 7.8 per cent requested by the company.

The interim utility rate increase means about $1.50 on the power bill of the average residential consumer.

FLOWER BASKETS HIBERNATING

If this week's rain and grey skies aren't sign enough that summer's over, city parks crews are making the fact all too clear by removing those gay ornaments to sun-filled summer streets — Victoria's famous hanging flower baskets.

All of them will be down by the end of the week, leaving lamp posts bare for the winter months ahead.

But there's little or no gap in the cycle, for next month the first seeds will be nurtured in the city nurseries... ready for the 1974 batch of baskets that go up next June.

And, thinking positively, that's only eight months away.

Man Admits Fleecing

A 21-year-old Richmond man invited into an elderly woman's home on the pretence he was forming a company to help senior citizens stole a cheque book and wrote two cheques worth $4,500.

Peter Murray de Goutiere pleaded guilty in Victoria provincial court Wednesday to two counts of uttering forged cheques last April.

Police said de Goutiere and a woman friend were invited into the home of Mrs. C. T. Beard, 75, of 1004 Terrace, and took the "necessary documents" to write the cheques.

One cheque for $2,100 was cashed at the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce 2241 Oak Bay, April 16. The other for $2,400 was presented for certification at the same bank April 30, then taken next door to the Bank of Montreal where de Goutiere opened an account, deposited $400 and took the balance in cash.

Wednesday's appearance in court was de Goutiere's second this week. He pleaded guilty Monday to cashing an $1,800 cheque drawn on the account of Mrs. Anna Hamm, 76, of Suite 204, 885 Craigflower.

Mrs. Hamm told police three young men, one of them the accused, came to her home Aug. 17 posing as telephone men. One of the men went into her bedroom where she kept her bank book.

One of the trio asked her to sign a paper, claiming it was a company policy to show that work had been done on her phone. She signed, not realizing it was a blank cheque.

Police said de Goutiere took the cheque to the Bank of Montreal, 1225 Douglas, asking that it be certified, then went to the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, 1175 Douglas where he opened an account and took $1,500 in cash.

Judge William Ostler remanded de Goutiere in custody until Sept. 28 for a pre-sentence report and sentencing.

Ostler said he will deal with all three charges then, in addition to two false pretence charges from Vancouver.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

An "extraordinary story" from a drug addict failed to sway Judge William Ostler in provincial court Wednesday.

Murray John Hayton, 24, of Millstream Road, was found guilty of possessing heroin. He was charged Jan. 24 after police found two caps under the floor mat of his car.

Hayton, a self-confessed addict, told the judge he didn't know the heroin was there.

He admitted owning two syringes which police also found in the car, and said he had a half-cap-a-day heroin habit.

A friend of Hayton's, Brian Pedley, testified he had placed the two caps in the car without Hayton's knowledge. He said the caps contained corn starch.

However, an analysis revealed the presence of heroin.

"It's an extraordinary story," said Judge Ostler. "I can't understand why if Pedley and the accused were both users, he would feel he had to hide the caps from his friend."

Ostler said the story was highly improbable.

He remanded Hayton until Oct. 23 for a pre-sentence report and sentencing.

Terry Ridings of 5 Helmcken Road, was fined $250 when he pleaded guilty to a charge of possession of MDA (speed).

Ridings, 22, was charged Sept. 7 in Colwood after police found a dirty syringe and two needles in his jacket pocket which he admitted he had used to take MDA.

Brian Robert Kean, 21, of 4000 Cedar Hill Crossroad, was fined $175 when found guilty of obstructing a police officer.

Kean tried to prevent police from arresting a man in the 1100 block Langley Street on July 25.

Ross Benson, 23, of 225 Ontario, described as a man with a "terrific drinking problem," was sentenced to six months in jail for stealing $15.46 worth of goods from two downtown stores. He pleaded guilty.

Judge F. S. Green said a jail term was "clearly indicated" as a means of helping Benson rehabilitate himself.

Police said Benson shoplifted $10.51 worth of goods from F. W. Woolworths on Aug. 7 and took a small green pendant worth $4.95 from Souvenir Gifts Galore Ltd., 1013 Government Street on Sept. 15.

Benson admitted a record including five convictions since November, 1972, of causing a disturbance by being drunk.

Green said he would recommend Benson be sent to the alcohol rehabilitation center at Alouette River.

Barry Northcott, 33, of 2842 Jacklin Road, received a 30-day jail sentence to be served on consecutive weekends when he was found guilty of assault causing bodily harm.

Judge Green ordered Northcott to stay away from his estranged wife and from Doris Rowan whom, police say, he pushed over a wall at 1009 Balmoral on July 1.

School's In Candi's Out

When school starts each fall, there are always those left behind to grow some more. Candi Peterson is just two years old, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Peterson of 2502 Wark St.

Across the street from Blanchard elementary school there's a little park for toddlers, with a platform which turns and swings and a slide.

But they're not much fun when you're all alone. Trouble is Candi's sister Tammy, who is five, is across the road in the kindergarten now.

Only Michelle, the dog is left. Dogs are nice to have around. But it's just not the same as the good old days.

Firearms Curbs Studied

Both the area and time for hunting in East Sooke Park may be further restricted, Recreation Minister Jack Radford said today.

But he also said the interests of hunters must be weighed along with those of hikers when use of a park the size of East Sooke is being determined.

At the moment, provincial regulations prohibit discharge of firearms in the park from Jan. 1 to Oct. 1 and only shotguns can be used, the remaining three months.

The capital regional board, under pressure from a number of outdoor groups, decided Wednesday to ask the province to make the firearms discharge ban in the park year-round. It is also considering some alternatives if the government won't agree.

Radford said today two moves are under consideration by his department:

—An extension of the area closed to hunting to include west of Sooke Road to the water.

—Reduction of the three-month exception to the ban to one month — from Nov. 1 to Dec. 2.

Radford said he hopes to meet with Mayor Frances Elford, chairman of the regional board's parks committee, later today to discuss the problem.

Elford is on record as opposing any hunting in the park and has made it clear that it is provincial regulations which permit it.

The regional board is faced with a dual problem on the issue, whether it has authority to prohibit hunting and whether it could enforce that authority if it has it.

Elford indicated to regional directors Wednesday that a preferable arrangement would be to have the province, which has the enforcing staff, enact a total hunting ban.

But the regional board may have the authority, under the Letters Patent which enable it to control firecrackers, to also preclude discharge of guns in the park, she said.

East Sooke Park, about 20 miles west of Victoria, is close to 4,000 acres.

Stardust Still Troubled

The freighter Irish Stardust still faces the prospect of a costly civil action suit on top of fines totalling $10,500 levied in Victoria Tuesday against the ship and captain for a January oil spill that polluted British Columbia waters.

A spokesman for the federal justice department said today preparations are being made to proceed with the civil suit against the freighter, her owners, Irish Shipping Ltd. of Dublin, and the Canadian pilot aboard the vessel when it grounded near Alert Bay.

The spokesman said no dates have been set for the civil suit.

Chris Hatfield, emergency co-ordinator for the federal environmental service, said clean-up of the oil spill, biggest in B.C. history, has cost $372,788.

It was originally estimated the job could cost $395,000 and a bond in that amount was posted with the Canadian government by the ship's Irish owners in April.

Hatfield said the bond money would be used by the government to cover the estimated damages if it wins its suit against the ship.

The ship discharged about 200 tons of bunker oil into fast-moving tidal waters off Vancouver Island after it grounded on a reef near Alert Bay.

Study Set on Merging of Hospitals

A two-day seminar in Victoria next month will probe the case for merging control of Royal Jubilee, Victoria General and perhaps other district hospitals.

The Capital regional hospital board authorized the seminar Wednesday, to be held Oct. 15 and 16 in the auditorium of the Eric Martin Institute.

District doctors, those concerned with hospital administration, advisors and regional directors will be invited and among speakers will be Dr. Richard Foulkes, consultant to the provincial government who is just completing a year-long study of all aspects of health care in B.C.

"There is ample evidence in most Canadian communities where more than one acute hospital exists of unnecessary and costly duplication of specialized service departments," executive director Dennis Young told the board Wednesday.

"While this region, for example, is served by only one burns unit and one renal dialysis unit, there are undoubtedly many other areas of specialization where such duplication does exist."

Young said there was a recommendation as far back as 1968 that only one paediatrics and one obstetrics department be required in the district.

Victoria Times

THURSDAY, SEPT. 20, 1973 11

SECOND SECTION

ommendation as far back as 1968 that only one paediatrics and one obstetrics department be required in the district. Both Jubilee and Victoria

General operate such departments now.

"It is a safe generalization, however, that to effectively and efficiently redevelop hospital services in the regional district our hospitals will have differing roles, but roles which complement one another," he said.

Where successful reorganization has occurred elsewhere in Canada and the U.S., "the most common solution is the merger of two or more hospitals into one corporate structure, which then continues to operate the hospitals on a decentralized basis."

Besides Foulkes, speakers will include:

Dr. Ernie Shortliffe, a consultant in health services who was involved in the merger of three hospitals in Delaware.

Fred Lamb, executive director of the Metro-Calgary and Rural General Hospital District, operating two hospitals and a school of nursing.

Dr. Jack Twelves, chief of general practice, Hamilton Civic Hospitals, operating two acute hospitals and a school of nursing, who will offer the practising physician's view on merged hospitals.

Dr. Twelves, who will not be able to attend the seminar, is videotaping his presentation and will be available to the audience, along with some colleagues, via a long-distance conference call hook-up.

Pilot's Name Perpetuated

A memorial honoring Sidney pilot Ted Clark who died in a plane crash Aug. 18 will be awarded annually to the outstanding male athlete at Parklands Secondary School.

Principal Joe Lott has also announced an additional bursary fund in Clark's name will be used to promote school sports for the next 10 years.

Both memorials will honor the 22-year-old pilot and former Parklands student who, along with four other persons was killed when a plane crashed and burned following take-off from Patricia Bay airport last month.

The trophy will be awarded to the student "who showed best the same attitudes Ted showed," Lott said: "good sportsmanship, dedication and contribution to the school's athletic program."

The memorial committee has arranged to set up a system allowing donors to deposit to the fund's account at Sidney banks.

Sold Pot To Buy Education

A Victoria youth who was selling marijuana so he could save money to go to university was sentenced in provincial court today to four months in jail.

John Ivan Larsen, 20, of 246 Crease, pleaded guilty Sept. 5 to possession of 1½ pounds of marijuana for the purpose of trafficking.

Larsen and another man were stopped by police while driving on Parry Street early Sept. 5. Police found 30 small plastic bags containing marijuana.

At that time, Larsen told police, he had bought the marijuana in Vancouver for $275 and was planning on doubling his money in Victoria.

Ostler described the case as "a crushing thing for the parents."

"It comes as a complete surprise and shock to parents who have no slight hint this is occurring in the bosom of the family."

The four-month jail sentence will be followed by 18 months probation.

Regional Board Set to Hire Social Planner

The Capital Regional District agreed Wednesday to add a social planner to its administrative staff to assist in its burgeoning activities.

The move will cover at least seven areas within the administration, the board decided, citing existing and planned services to health, housing, hospital, social services, park development, recreational planning and municipal services as requested.

The board also agreed to ask the provincial human resources department to provide financial assistance on a continuing basis to the extent of 75 per cent of the total cost.

In an interview after the regional board meeting, Garth Homer, executive director of the Community Council of Greater Victoria, agreed that the council's days as it exists now are numbered.

Homer, who attended the meeting, said a "Social Planning Service" is needed to work in new opportunities provided by the province.

He said "someone" will be hired as a social planner but he said he hasn't been hired and continues to work for the Community Council.

Aspects of Community Council work would be assumed by the regional district, he said.

The provincial government had integrated local welfare services and the old Family and Children's Service and provincial health services are "probably" going to become a regional function. Local welfare would probably come eventually under the regional district.

"So the region has to have a capacity to handle these services," he said.

He described the Community Council as a social planning organization, financed by the Community Chest, fees for service and provincial and municipal grants. It attempts to take health, recreation, welfare and other matters in the non-government field and organize them and develop them "so we have an effective system."

VLC-Sponsored Dinner to Honor Sandringham Strikers' Tenacity

The Sandringham Private Hospital strike is three years old Sept. 30 and the Victoria Labor Council will mark the anniversary with an informal dinner.

"We have decided to do this in recognition of the heroic efforts of these strikers who have maintained their strike against Sandringham Private Hospital since September, 1970," said council secretary Larry Ryan.

These CUPE members are deserving of recognition for their tenacity and courage. Their record matches that of some of the early struggles of the trade unions for social and economic justice."

The council was told Wednesday night that six of the original 28 strikers are still actively picketing.

Members of Local 331, Canadian Union of Public Employees, went on strike for a first contract. The private hospital has continued running by hiring replacements.

The labor council was also told that the remaining active strikers now are receiving benefits from the defence fund of the B.C. Federation of Labor.

Council vice-president John Schibli, asked after the meeting why the BCFL is paying benefits, said it is "because of a temporary financial problem in CUPE. It is understood that local area CUPE unions will be filling the breach."

The council, in a resolution, will ask the B.C. Federation of Labor convention to "salute" and continue supporting the strike to ensure "justice will be done."

Bread Price to Stabilize

Bread prices will stabilize in the near future rather than go down because of a new federal subsidy, John McDonald, president of McDonald's Bakery Limited, said today.

He was commenting on a news report that one bakery in Edmonton will lower its wholesale price to stores about five cents a loaf Monday.

McDonald said his bakery won't increase prices as planned Oct. 1 because of the increased federal subsidy to flour-millers.

He did not expect smaller bakeries to be reducing prices either.

'Sexist' City Chamber Boosting Female Role

MURPHY
... status quo OK

Militant females who demand instant equality with men must remember that many thousands of women are happy with the status quo, says Ken Murphy, president of the Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce.

"I don't know whether it is more than 50 per cent or not but I do know that many women I have discussed this with are content with their special role," he said.

"They want equal pay but otherwise are not seeking full equality."

Murphy was replying in an interview to a speech to the chamber Wednesday by Human Rights Act director Kathleen Ruff.

She criticized the chamber for promoting sexist attitudes by sponsoring a seminar for women consisting of typing, grooming and how to please your boss. She said sex appeal is a major consideration in hiring women but not men.

Murphy defended the seminar, saying that while the nature of the courses assumed the women had a secretarial job, "you have to face the fact that 100 per cent of the secretaries are women."

He said there might be some validity to the criticism about including a course on grooming for secretaries.

"However, I'm sure she (Ruff) would find that training courses for young men include some references to good grooming."

Murphy said men's attitudes towards women are gradually changing.

"The status of women today is quite different than it was 20 years ago, 10 years ago or even five years ago."

"But the process has to be gradual. As long as women seek to change their status by evolution that's fine but if they want revolution — that's another matter."

He said there was little support among men for a radical change in the status of women.

Murphy said, however, he was pleased that Ruff had raised the issue and the chamber directors will discuss the matter further to see what could be done to combat subtle discrimination against women.

He said job advertisements in most cases should properly be directed to both men and women and not assume that a difficult, high-paying job could only be filled by a man.

He said there were many forms of subtle discrimination against women that most people don't notice and activists like Ruff perform a service to the community by bringing these things to public attention.

"The chamber will give this problem a good deal of thought."

He said there seemed to be universal support for the concept of equal pay for equal work but other areas where women were seeking to be the same as men had provoked controversy.

Murphy said the new policy of the chamber would be to integrate males and females to a greater extent than in the past.

Men will be encouraged to bring their wives to chamber meetings and females will be encouraged to bring their husbands. In addition, employers will be encouraged to bring their secretaries.

The policy change was decided upon before Ruff's speech.

Membership of the chamber is predominately male although there are several female members and the chamber elected its first female president, Helen Beirnes, in the 1971-72 term.

Island Man Dies In Copter Crash

PRINCE RUPERT (CP)—A man killed Tuesday in a helicopter crash near Telegraph Creek was identified Wednesday by RCMP as Patrick W. McNeil, 27 of Cassidy, near Nanaimo.

An employee of Vancouver Island Helicopters Ltd., he was carrying out work for a mining company in northwestern British Columbia at the time of the accident. Police said transport department officials were investigating the crash, but had not yet determined the cause.

PRINCE GEORGE (CP)—A worker for the Committee to Aid American War Objectors said Wednesday many illegal immigrants in northern B.C. suspect the federal government's campaign to register them for landed immigrant status is a trap. Steve Hilbert said most illegal residents are afraid to come out of hiding.

VANCOUVER (CP)—RCMP warned Wednesday a number of counterfeit $50 bills which first appeared in British Columbia in July are still in circulation. A police spokesman said the bills are a clever copy of the real article but the paper on which they are printed is slightly thicker than genuine bank note paper. The bills are also slightly shorter and narrower than the real thing.

VANCOUVER (CP)—Damages of $90,650 were awarded in B.C. Supreme Court Wednesday to a Burnaby man who was crushed between two trucks in a gravel pit three years ago.

Walter C. Unger was given the award by Mr. Justice R. P. Anderson.

Unger, an independent truck operator at the time, sued Stanley Wisniewski of Port Coquitlam.

Mr. Justice Anderson said Unger suffered severe abdominal injuries when he was standing in front of his own vehicle when Wisniewski's truck backed into him, crushing him between the two trucks.

VANCOUVER (CP)—An application for discharge from bankruptcy by Edward John (Fat Eddie) Johnston, the White Rock tycoon who went broke last year leaving a long list of creditors, has been adjourned.

Lawyer John McAlpine requested that the application, which had to be made within 12 months of the bankruptcy, be waived for two years on grounds that Johnston wants additional time to review his financial affairs.

MAPLE RIDGE (CP)—Unit 2822 of the Surrey-Delta Army Cadets will spend the last weekend of September repairing about $600 damage done by vandals to the YMCA camp near the Golden Ears Park. A spokesman said wall and a staircase in a cabin were torn down and burned. A stove was ripped out and a tree was chopped down.

VANCOUVER (CP)—Mayor Art Phillips said Wednesday he believes city council will approve expense accounts for city department heads. The request has been turned down before but Mayor Phillips said council will probably agree in order to give the department heads more freedom.

U.S. AHEAD IN SALMON BUT NOT FOR LONG

VANCOUVER (CP)—American fishermen are ahead of the Canadians in sockeye and pink salmon catches so far this season, but the split is expected to be evened as fishing continues.

Figures released by the International Pacific Salmon Fisheries Commission Wednesday gave these estimates of catches to Monday: Sockeye, U.S. cumulative total, 2,615,046 fish; Canadian cumulative total, 2,529,030; Pink, U.S. cumulative total, 2,107,818; Canadian, 1,814,217.

John Roos, assistant director of the commission, said the gap will be closed in the late season because most salmon returning to the Fraser River have passed through international waters and now are in Canadian waters, where fishing continues for another month.

Delta's Young Farmers Lose Hope in Future

VANCOUVER (CP)—A report prepared for the Greater Vancouver Regional District says young farmers in nearby Delta are stricken with a sense of futility and are turning away from agriculture because they are uncertain about the future of farming.

The report, prepared for the GVRD's planning committee by agricultural consultants Baton, Smith and Gram Ltd., said the young farmers' attitudes spring from a dramatic change in ownership of more than half the municipality's farmland.

"In our opinion, the greatest single contributor to the non-viability of Delta agriculture is the fact that of a total of approximately 19,330 acres of traditional farmland in the district, 10,371 acres of 53 per cent of the farmland is owned either by government or private absentee landlords. Only 8,959 acres, or 47 per cent, of the land being farmed is occupied by the owners," the report said.

The report said farming was interrupted in part by the B.C. government's expropriation in 1969 of 4,000 acres in West Delta and a right-of-way for the B.C. Railway in east and central Delta.

Newsprint Shortage Delays Post's Birth

VANCOUVER (CP)—Tentative starting date for the Vancouver Post, a proposed new Sunday newspaper, has been put off until spring, Frank Bernard, a principal in the venture, said Wednesday.

"It looks like it will be this spring if we're lucky," Bernard said in an interview.

"There are quite a number of problems, one of the most serious of which is the current newsprint shortage."

He said the paper's backers fear that as newcomers to the newspaper field, they would be "at the bottom of the list for newsprint supplies."

Bernard said the raising capital for the paper was not one of the problems of the backers, but technical difficulties including paper supplies were the most serious causes of delay.

"If the technical problems continue, it is not inconceivable that money problems could develop, said Bernard.

"But we're working at it and making slow progress. That's about all I can say."

Fast Start But Expos Fizzle

CHICAGO (AP) — Some of the long-missing power returned to the Chicago Cubs bats Wednesday in a home run rally that provided an 8-6 victory over Montreal Expos.

The Expos jumped on Rick Reuschel for five hits and five runs in the opening inning, but manager Whitey Lockman stuck with his pitcher until the sixth when Mike Paul took over.

Paul hurled three scoreless innings, retiring nine of 10 Expos, but after Felipe Alou led off the ninth with his first National League homer of the year, Bob Locker came on to earn his 15th save. Victory went to Reuschel, making him 14-15.

The Cubs scored five times in the fifth to hand Montreal relief ace Mike Marshall the defeat. Marshall, 12-11, with 29 saves, made his 86th appearance when Mike Torrez was shelled in the big fifth keyed by Rick Monday's two-run homer.

Ron Santo slammed Marshall's second pitch for a two-run homer to give the Cubs a 6-5 lead. Williams added a two-run homer in the seventh.

In Montreal's first inning blast, Bob Bailey, Ron Fairly and Ken Singleton ripped singles for one run, then Bernie Allen hit a two-run double and Bob Stinson poked a two-run single.

Lockman said he stayed with Reuschel "because he got better and better as the game progressed" and when Paul was brought in he did just the relief job we needed at the right time."

nant, then Expos are in good hands with this young lad who kisses baseball he caught during game.

Keeping Up With Mets' Jones Impossible Task for Pirates

Times News Services Pittsburgh Pirates had trouble keeping up with one particular Jones on Wednesday night.

Cleon Jones belted two home runs to lead New York Mets to a 7-3 win over Pirates and into the thick of the National League's East Division baseball race.

New York shares third place with St. Louis Cardinals, both clubs just 1½ games behind the leading Pirates. Second-place Montreal Expos are one game back and even fifth-place Chicago is still alive, just four games off the pace.

Cardinals dropped a 3-2 decision to Philadelphia Phillies, Expos were beaten 8-6 by the Cubs, Los Angeles Dodgers dumped Atlanta Braves 4-1, Cincinnati Reds topped San Francisco Giants 5-1 and Houston Astros topped San Diego Padres 8-5 before losing 6-3 in other National League action.

In the American League, California Angels defeated Texas Rangers 6-2 and 9-4, Boston Red Sox tripped New York Yankees 3-1, Oakland Athletics edged Minnesota Twins 3-0, Milwaukee Brewers clipped Cleveland Indians 7-4, Detroit Tigers mangled Baltimore Orioles 10-1 and Chicago White Sox edged by Kansas City Royals 4-3 in a 12-inning contest.

Jones, one of the stars in the Mets 1969 championship season, has been bothered by an assortment of injuries this year and has often been accused of "dogging it."

"I've felt lousy all season. People have accused me of not wanting to play, but that's not true. I love this game of baseball and I always give 100 per cent."

Phillies' Steve Carlton a 21-game winner last season, picked up his 12th win and helped his own cause by singling in the fifth and scoring on a wild pitch by Tom Murphy. Del Unser's single later in the inning drove in the winning run against the Cards.

Fred Norman stopped San Francisco on just two base hits-to-square-his record at 12-12 and reduce Cincinnati's magic number for clinching the National League Division pennant to five.

The Dodgers picked up all their runs in the eighth, two of them on a single by Ron Cey and another on a single by Willie Davis. Dave Johnson got the Atlanta run with his 43rd home run of the season, breaking the record for most homers in one year by a second baseman, set in 1922 by Rogers Hornsby.

Rich Troedson fired an eight-hitter in the nightcap for the Padres after the Astros won the opener on the strength of two-run doubles by Dave Campbell and Cliff Johnson.

Clyde Is Ready And Confident

TORONTO (CP) — Clyde Gray is oozing confidence as he prepares for his first crack at the world welterweight boxing title Saturday night, and his training camp is in a winning mood.

Gray, the 28-year-old former Halifax truck driver, is Mr. Cool as he works out in the Albion Hills northwest of here for his meeting with Cuban-born Jose Napoles of Mexico.

"I think that's the big difference in me, even since as short a while ago as February when I fought Eddie Blay for the Commonwealth title," Gray said Wednesday of his new-found attitude towards the pro fight game. "I used to get a chance and try too hard."

"Sometimes I'd miss the chance by trying too hard."

He's learned to relax in the ring since his conquest of Blay, but "not too relaxed so I'll be careless, just enough to wait for an opening and then take it."

And Gray is as ready as he's ever been for a fight, the muscles rock hard on his slender 5-foot-9 frame. He's at 146 pounds, the weight he expects to carry into the ring.

Napoles, on the other hand, arrived in the city last week at 156 pounds — nine pounds above the welterweight limit — and has been sweating it off in Toronto.

PAYOFF TOO SMALL FOR AARON

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Hank Aaron approaches Babe Ruth's career home run record with a feeling that breaking the mark would be more valuable commercially if a white player had done it.

"I think a white player would have endorsements just flooding at his feet," Aaron commented.

"They're certainly not flooding at my feet. I do get a few endorsements," maybe when someone feels sorry for me."

In comparison with the financial deals he has received during his home run assault, now just three shy of Ruth's 714, Aaron pointed to the endorsement opportunities given swimmer Mark Spitz.

"He earned seven gold medals swimming one year in the Olympics and the endorsements really came in," Aaron said.

'Carrie Nations' Flock to Tennis

HOUSTON (AP) — They had to take down the Men Only signs in the press box at the Astrodome for tonight's $100,000 winner-take-all tennis match between Bobby Riggs and Billie Jean King.

There'll be a female occupant in almost every other seat when they start battling the yellow balls around in the celebrated "second Battle of the Sexes."

Tonight's televised match will be shown at 6:30 p.m. on channel 4, Seattle.

"I've never seen so many dames covering a sports event in my life," commented one gnarled old baseball writer in tennis sneakers. "But it's kind a fun."

Many of the newspapers decided to platoon the big event. They not only sent a male sports writer or several, but also a woman off the city side

TELEVISION FANS SEE EXPO DRIVE

Baseball fans wanting to watch Montreal Expos make their late-season drive for the National League's Eastern Division pennant will be able to catch some of the action via CBC television.

Final innings and highlights of the Pittsburgh at Montreal game will be shown after the telecast of the Edmonton-Ottawa Canadian Football League tussle Sept. 22.

The Montreal at Pittsburgh game will be carried Sept. 29 and the CBC has announced its intention to pre-empt National Football League coverage on Sept. 30 if it looks like Montreal has a chance to take the championship.

In making the announcement, a CBC spokesman said the network "will be watching the situation on a day-to-day basis and will make every attempt to telecast other critical games involving the Expos."

Cougars Cut to 49

Inter-Squad Contest Scheduled Tonight

Only 49 hopefuls are left to dress for the annual inter-squad sneak-peak game staged by Victoria Cougars of the Western Canada Junior Hockey League tonight at Memorial Arena.

Cougar coach Ollie Dorohoy and Bob Brisco, coach of affiliated Nanaimo Clippers of the B.C. Junior League, trimmed about 20 players from the training camp roster Wednesday.

Following tonight's contest, which starts at 8, the group will be split with half going with Dorohoy for an exhibition series and half accompanying Briscoe back to Nanaimo for the Clipper camp.

Meanwhile, in a pair of WCHL exhibition games Wednesday night, Calgary Centennials hammered visiting New Westminster Bruins 10-2 and Brandon Wheat Kings topped host Winnipeg Clubs, formerly Jets, 3-1.

Danny Gare and Jerry Holland each scored two goals to lead Calgary while single tallies were recorded by Dan Mandryk, Don Ashby, Wayne Morin, Larry Lestander, Mark Severny and Rob Flockhart.

Marty Mathews and Bob Hess replied for Bruins.

Ron Chippertfield, John Paddock and Ron Pronchuk scored for Brandon while Randy Knight averted a shutout for Winnipeg.

Argos' 100-Yard Trip to Nowhere

TORONTO (CP) — How often does a football team generate 100 yards on one play and fail to score?

Toronto Argonauts did Wednesday night. Quarterback Joe Theismann and Eric Allen combined on a pass-and-run play that covered 100 yards before Saskatchewan's Lewis Cook was able to haul the Argo flanker down five yards short of the Roughrider goalline.

On the next play, Theismann's pass to Mike Eben in the Saskatchewan end zone was intercepted by Jim Elder, a player that "turned the game" in the "Riders' favor," says Ron Lancaster.

"That turned the game," the Saskatchewan quarterback was saying after the Roughriders rebounded for two fourth-quarter touchdowns en route to a 21-15 victory over the Argos.

"Had they scored then we'd have been 14 points down and it would have been tough to come from that far behind. As it was, it left us in good shape for the win."

Lancaster and fullback George Reed ran for one-yard touchdowns and the Roughrider field general, who holds most of the Canadian Football League passing marks, hit halfback Bobby Thompson with a nine-yard scoring pass for the other Saskatchewan major score.

Jack Abendschan converted all three. Bill Symons, on a one-yard run, and a Theismann-to-Pete Muller pass accounted for the Toronto touchdowns. Zenon Andrusyshyn kicked both converts and added a 37-yard punt on a wide field goal attempt that provided the Argos with 15-7 margin at three-quarters.

Both teams relied on a 15-mile-an-hour wind at their backs to score, the Argos opting for the breeze in the first and third quarters.

Lancaster admitted, he would have been content late in the game to move into position for a field goal with the Roughriders down 15-14 and then hope the Saskatchewan defences could hold.

"But hell, he (Reed) and Abendschan said 'No way. We're going for the big one,'" Lancaster said of the final score by Reed with just over two minutes left in the game. "No one wanted a field goal. They were fired up for a TD."

The game put the Western Conference-leading Roughriders four points ahead of runner-up Edmonton Eskimos with a 7-2 record. The Argos still lead second-place Ottawa Rough Riders by three points in the Eastern Conference with a 5-2-1 mark.

It was expected to be Argos' defence trying to thwart the Saskatchewan offence controlled by Lancaster's arm and Reed's legs. Two starters in the Toronto defensive unit, tackle Jim Stillwagon and linebacker Tom Surlas, gave the Argos the edge in the first half.

But neither player was used in the final 30 minutes, both suffering from leg injuries.

Toronto coach John Rauch admitted their absence contributed to the outcome of the game, but said that both would be healthy for Argos' next outing against the Alouettes at Montreal Sunday.

Theismann, whose past record shows he's prepared to challenge the defences from any point of the field, admitted in the Argo dressing room he made two mistakes that rebounded in Saskatchewan's favor.

"The first was on that pass to Eben. It was under-thrown. The second one was on that fumble late in the game. There was a mixup in the exchange."

The latter "exchange" came with time running out and the Argos third and five at the Saskatchewan 46-yard line when Theismann dropped the ball.

Rauch, however, tended to be less critical—particularly on the pass to Eben that wound up in Elder's possession.

"We thought that the play was open. We talked it over with Joe. The timing wasn't right. It was one of those things that happen in football."

On Field, Kent Prefers To Maintain Reputation

Mike Denness doesn't arrive here until tonight.

But he couldn't resist, putting out a feeler to determine the cricket mood of Victoria.

He was keen to know, Denness confessed in a telephone interview from Vancouver, just how interest was running on Vancouver Island in the forthcoming visit by his Kent county team.

Kent, currently the most flamboyant and exciting team in English cricket, plays a Victoria XI in a one-day match Saturday at Beacon Hill Park.

And Denness was quick to dispel any idea it will be a "picnic game" or a "holiday" for the men from Kent.

"When they're not on the field, the players relax, enjoy the sights and meet the people," explained Denness. "But on the field, we endeavour to show the public why we are regarded as the best and brightest county team in England."

"There's only one way to play cricket—and that's in an entertaining way," said Denness. "That's what the public wants, to be entertained."

Kent has the kind of all-star cast capable of putting on quite a show.

And those who like to sit under the trees around the Beacon Hill Park pitch had better keep their eyes on the ball when big-hitting former West Indies international John Sheppard goes in to bat.

"John really likes to use the air," Denness said with a laugh.

And then there are the classic "stroke-makers" like Brian Luckhurst and Alan Knott who, like Denness and bowler Derek Underwood, both play for England.

Knott is considered the best wicketkeeper in the world today and is also, as Denness puts it, a fine batsman.

Then there are first-class players like Dave Nicholls, Bob Woolmer, Graham Johnston, Richard Elms, John Graham, Peter Topley and Richard Hills.

Victoria Selects will be captained by Nick Walton of Castaways. Completing the team are Alec Porter, Dave Billingham and Keith Dixon (Albion); Dave Auld and Dave Clarke (Castaways); Tim Lord and Tim Brierley (Cowichan); Kortwright Richards (Oak Bay); Jim Wenman (Incogs); and John Schofield (Alcos).

Anthony Brierley of Cowichan is 12th man.

The six-hour match starts at 11 a.m. Saturday. Lunch is from 1 p.m. to 1:40. Play resumes from 1:40 to 3:40, with a tea break until 4 p.m., and then goes again from 4 to 6.

Managed by former batting great Len Ames, Kent is the fastest-scoring side in England. Although it finished only fourth in the league, Kent swept all the one-day league and knockout trophies—the John Player League, the Benson and Hedges Trophy and the Fenner Trophy.

Luckhurst is the club's batting star. He has been playing for Kent since 1958 and has hit a career total of 16,551 runs, including 37 centuries.

But it's Denness who is the latest glamor boy of English cricket.

The 32-year-old Denness, appointed county captain in 1972, shot into the international spotlight this summer when he was named to captain England in a one-day match against the West Indies, England won.

Denness first played for England against New Zealand in 1969 and then against the Rest of the World team in 1970.

A stylish right-hand batsman whose best score was 174 for Kent against Derbyshire in 1965, Denness has been named to captain England on a three-month tour of the West Indies starting in January.

When he's not playing cricket, Mike Denness is an insurance broker in Canterbury. Accompanied on the four-game B.C. tour by his wife Molly, he will stay in Victoria with Castaways captain Auld.

For Denness, as for the rest of the Kent team, this is a first-time in Canada visit.

"Oh, some of the players have been through, with an airport stop, but this is the first time we have met anyone," Denness said.

So far his feelings are mixed.

The visit to Vancouver has been "very enjoyable"; the rain to a cricketer is disappointing; and yes, their win Sunday over an all-star team from the Mainland League was "rather easy"; and it's a "little early" yet the say too much about the standard of play here.

Perhaps Victoria fans, players and, hopefully, the weather, will help Mike Denness and his boys unscramble those feelings and let them return to England with fond cricket memories from B.C.

GOODBYE to baseball was said today by Willie Mays at New York's Shea Stadium. Hobbled by injuries this year, Mets' outfielder played most of his 22-year career with San Francisco Giants. Mays will continue to pay Mays $50,000 annually until he's 50.

Oak Bay's Late Try Beats UVic

Forward Neil Bonnell barged over for a try late in the second half Wednesday to give Oak Bay Wanderers a 9-6 win over the University of Victoria Vikings in a Victoria Rugby Union first-division game at UVic.

Mike Elcock converted the try and booted a first-half penalty goal for Oak Bay.

Vikings, edged 6-3 by Castaways when league play began Sunday, led 6-3 at half time after two penalty goals kicked by Rick Couch. But the students had to play the second half with only 13 men after Danny Wallis and Chris Daniels both left the field with injuries.

Plenty of Variety In Sports Festival

Varied is the only term to describe the fourth annual Esquimalt festival of sports week program which starts Sunday.

Track events, broomball, speed skating, basketball, ice and field hockey, figure skating, soccer, sailing and a star-studded old-timers' hockey game are included in the seven-day affair designed to promote spectator interest in Esquimalt sports.

The festival also presents an opportunity to honor outstanding accomplishments by athletes, teams and executives of the area.

Trophies will be presented at a banquet Sept. 29 to the top achievers in six categories — male and female athletes of the year in both summer and winter sports, sportsman of the year and team of the year.

Head-table speakers at the dinner will be former National League great Babe Pratt of Vancouver, Willingdon Cup golfer Dave Mick and Canadian lacrosse hall-of-famers Archie Browning and Whitey Sevenson.

Pratt will also play in the old-timers' game Sept. 28 with some well-known veterans — Alex Shilbick, Neil Colville, Clint Smith, Alf Pike and Fred (Cyclone) Taylor. They will join more recently retired stars Bob McCusker, Bruce Carmichael, Billy McNeil, Tony Leswick, Gary Begg, Long John Henderson, Ron Mathews, Kevin Conway, Dave Duke, Ron Hutchison, Ken Salters, Trent Beatty and George Wood in a game against players trying out for Victoria Maple Leafs of the Pacific International Junior hockey League.

Kent Cricketers Held to Draw

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Cricket Association President's XI, with the aid of four extra men, some poor weather which held up play, and a picnic atmosphere, managed to hold the Kent County XI of England to a draw in an exhibition game Wednesday.

After losing about an hour during the morning session due to steady rain, Kent built up a total of 176 runs for five wickets before declaring with 135 minutes left to play.

With a bit of luck, the B.C. side could have made further inroads into the Kent batting but dropped two catches in the first three overs. Brian Luckhurst with 67 and David Laycock with 38, both players not out at the close, led for the visitors. Peter McDonald was the only multiple wicket-taker for the B.C. with two for 42.

The B.C. team, which alternated four extra men in the field, also used them to bat. This made the difference between a win and a draw as they were 110 for 12 at stumps.

Kent needed to take 14 wickets under the relaxed rules for a victory. Paul Griffin, with 16, and Stu Allan, with 15 not out, were the leading B.C. batsmen. For Kent, Derek Underwood took four for 23 and John Graham had three for 13.

Kent travels to Victoria today for a match against a Victoria and District XI Saturday, returning here for a match against a B.C. XI Sunday.

Ali's Asian Tour Off

NEW YORK (Reuter) — Muhammad Ali has cancelled an exhibition tour of Southeast Asia. But he will go through with his scheduled bout against Rudi Lubbers in Jakarta, Indonesia, Oct. 20.

Robert Arum, Ali's lawyer, said Ali sprained his right hand in winning a split decision over Ken Norton in Los Angeles Sept. 10 and "he doesn't want to take any chances on reinjuring it before the Lubbers fight."

Late Start This Year For Openers in NHL

MONTREAL (CP) — The National Hockey League announced Wednesday that its 57th season will begin in seven cities Oct. 10 — the latest start since the 1969-70 schedule.

This season's 624 game schedule spans 25 weeks and includes 26 weekends before ending with six games April 7, the latest closing date in league history.

The opening night games are: Montreal Canadiens at Minnesota North Stars; Buffalo Sabres at Toronto Maple Leafs; Detroit Red Wings at New York Rangers; New York Islanders at Atlanta Flames; Vancouver Canucks at Boston Bruins; Chicago Black Hawks at Los Angeles Kings; and St. Louis Blues at California Golden Seals.

Philadelphia Flyers open their season Oct. 11 at home against Toronto, while Pittsburgh Penguins first game is at Atlanta, Oct. 12.

There are games each night of the week during the schedule with Montreal Canadiens being the only team with a game each day sometime during the season. The Canadiens have one Monday game, two Tuesday games, eight Wednesday games, four Thursday games, one Friday game, 20 Saturday games and three Sunday contests.

Almost half the schedule comprises weekend games with Saturday being the most popular — 164 games. There are 143 Sunday dates, 126 Wednesday games, 85 Thursday contests, 59 on Tuesday, Fridays have 44 and three Monday competitions.

The 27th annual all-star game will be played Jan. 29 at Chicago. As in the last three seasons, the East Division all-stars will oppose those of the West Division.

New Faces Give Canucks Hope

MEDICINE HAT (CP) — A number of new faces have generated fresh optimism in the training camp of Vancouver Canucks of the National Hockey League.

General Manager Hal Laycoe and rookie coach Bill McCreary agreed in interviews Wednesday that new netminders Gary Smith and Jacques Caron should help the Canucks vacate the Eastern Division cellar they occupied last season.

Laycoe also said rookie defenceman Bob Dailey, a six-foot-five graduate of Toronto

Mariboros, has been a welcome addition to the 50-man roster.

Also high in the eyes of the Vancouver brass is six-foot-six Keith Mackie, who played last season for Edmonton Oil Kings of the Western Canada Hockey League. Mackie's progress has been delayed while doctors examine the eye he injured during the 1971-72 Memorial Cup junior playoffs.

The lanky defenceman played well last season and appeared fully recovered from the injury but doctors here have ordered him to remain out of workouts until they are satisfied the eye is sound.

"It's an unfortunate situation," said Laycoe.

"Until we are in complete agreement what is to be done, it is better to keep Mackie off the ice."

Despite the absence of Mackie from sessions at the camp which started Sunday, Coach McCreary feels the club is stronger than in the past.

He pointed to the presence of two other talented rookies, Dennis Ververgaert from London Knights and Paulin Boredeau from Toronto Marlboros of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A Series.

Both have shown well so far, he said, in their bid to break into the Canucks' forward lines. McCreary expressed confidence in the ability of the two speedsters and said they figure to join Dailey in the opening-night lineup.

The biggest name missing from last year's roster is Dale Tallon, the moody defenceman-centre who went to Chicago in the trade for Smith.

Also missing from last year's roster is Dave Balon, veteran winger who had a poor season and remained home after turning down a contract that proposed a major cut in salary.

The Canucks open their exhibition season Friday with a game against Los Angeles Kings in Calgary. The clubs meet here Saturday and travel to Spokane, Sunday for their third game in three nights.

Canucks play the Kings in Victoria on Wednesday, Oct. 3.

"This book really takes me back to Moscow."
PAUL HENDERSON

The best from Canada and Russia met for that showdown series. This was a human drama. A national frenzy. A coast-to-coast shout of joy when Paul Henderson flipped in the final last-minute goal to win the series for Canada. It's all here. Hundreds of spectacular full-colour photos that freeze the action of every crucial play. Fast-moving text that takes you behind the scenes. But supplies are definitely limited. So drive over to your Firestone Store to be sure you won't be disappointed. This authoritative book is published by Hockey Canada. All profit is to aid amateur hockey.

Indian Centre Seeks Funds To Survive

The Pacific Association of Friendship Centres has told the federal government it needs about $60,000 quickly to preserve the Indian activity program in Quesnel.

Bob Cantryn, B.C. provincial executive secretary of the association, said in Victoria Wednesday the funds are needed to replace the Friendship Centre there which was destroyed by fire.

The building was old and the insurance would not begin to cover the cost of replacing the building, he said.

Cantryn was in Victoria Wednesday to attend a meeting of the provincial Association of Non Status Indians at the Strathcona Hotel.

He said the funds are available through a $25 million migrating, native peoples program announced by the federal government last year.

However, the Pacific Association of Friendship Centres has been trying since July to get construction funds, with no success.

He said it was a case of an urgent social need being enmeshed in red tape in Ottawa.

While the $25 million program was announced in 1972, the federal secretary of state Hugh Falkner has subsequently cut the program back to $10 million at the rate of $2 million per year for five years.

The funds might be restored later if federal revenues improved, he was quoted as saying.

Cantryn said operation grants and funds for emergency construction programs should continue to be available despite the federal cut-back.

He added the B.C. association would hold talks with provincial government officials on the possibility of obtaining grants for Indian programs at the centres.

He said the federal program offers funds to build and operate Friendship Centres but does not supply money to carry out long-term programs.

The talks will be held with Rehabilitation Minister Norman Levi.

MECHANICAL THUMB JOINT

Doctors and engineers at the University of Cincinnati installed a metal thumb joint last week in the thumb of a man who lost the use of that digit 10 years ago.

The joint, shown above, was developed without any outside funds by graduate students, engineers and medical men at the university.

It can also be used to replace joints crippled by arthritis.

BUS LINE SUED AFTER MUGGING

LONDON (CP) — Helen Evans, a 21-year-old university student who was beaten unconscious and robbed during a United States vacation tour, has had to give up her studies.

"Helen has lost her memory," says her father, Jack Evans, "and she can't even remember what she learned in her first two years of university, so there's not much use of going back at this stage."

Meanwhile, the Evans family has brought a $1-million lawsuit against the Greyhound Bus Co. for permitting "inadequate safety precautions" on the package tour which Helen and her 22-year-old fiancé, John Penniket, were taking through the U.S. She was beaten and repeatedly kicked in the head in a Miami women's washroom Aug. 8 by a man who later made off with $20 which Helen had in her purse. A 21-year-old Detroit man has since been arrested.

Highways Patronage Lingers On Shuswap MLA Tells Legislature

New Democratic Party backbencher Don Lewis said Wednesday he's getting "a lot of flak" from his constituents because contractors favored by the Secord government are still getting highways department jobs.

The Shuswap MLA told the legislature that in his riding Joe Haul Trucking is getting most of the department's paving and road contracts and other firms are protesting.

"There's the odd Liberal would like a job too," said Lewis when MLAs kidded him about wanting to assign some of the work to NDP supporters.

Complaining that the "same people are getting the same jobs," Lewis said government contracts should be spread around.

The highways department for years has been the subject of accusations that it is the main source of patronage jobs.

Lewis also said the department's bureaucracy is difficult to deal with.

He said "shameful" delays of up to two years have occurred in handling applications for subdivisions.

Lewis criticized the government for not acting to establish a broiler chicken industry in the province's interior.

While praising Agriculture Minister Dave Stupich for good work in other agricultural areas, he said the government should be doing something to take some of the broiler chicken industry away from producers in the Fraser Valley and Vancouver Island.

Lewis said the department of agriculture has given permits for the raising of more broiler chickens to some companies which already have adequate supplies.

"You're making a lot of fat cats at the expense of people in the rest of the province," he said.

Lewis contended that agriculture is one area where interior communities can thrive, since they are so low on industrial development in comparison to the lower mainland.

Don Phillips (SC) — South Peace River waged a lengthy verbal attack on the government for allowing runaway inflation in the province.

"Inflation will bring down this province and this nation to its knees quicker than a nuclear war," Phillips said.

While B.C. should be setting an example to the rest of the nation in controlling inflation, in fact, Phillips said, they have set an inflationary trend with their salary increases.

Government actions contributing to inflation, the Secord said, include Bill 42 (Land Commission Act) which has increased the price of homes, Bill 153 (Public Works Fair Employment Act) which has increased the size of government contract bids, and the settlement given B.C. Ferry workers.

Phillips said Bill 153 was also leaving companies in the province "scared spittless" because they fear they must be card-carrying NDP if they hope to get government contracts.

He blamed the government for closing down Willingdon reform school for girls and not replacing it with "some other program" to help girls.

In his own riding, Phillips said, two girls released from Willingdon when it closed, burned down a school this year, while another boy, "the product of schools without straps," also burned down a school.

Phillips charged that mining and petroleum exploration in the Peace River area are at all-time lows due to the creation of "uncertainty and dependency" by the NDP government.

Coal Sale Deal Long Way to Go

Provincial government negotiations with Brascan Resources Ltd. for sale of Sukunka coal have a long way to go, Premier Barrett told the legislature Wednesday.

The premier said the blending quality of the coal is excellent and representatives of British Steel Corp., which has expressed interest in buying the coal, were in his office Tuesday discussing negotiations.

He told Oak Bay MLA Scott Wallace he could not give a date when negotiations would be settled because "outside consultants and legal help" have been called in to assist with feasibility studies.

The B.C. government plans to purchase a 40 per cent share in the deposit near Chetwynd, provided the other 60 per cent is purchased by Brascan.

In other questions put before cabinet ministers, Education Minister Eileen Dailly said she would not give school boards any guidelines to follow in their wage negotiations with teachers.

Those negotiations, she said, are a matter between individual boards and teacher associations.

BARGAIN MEAT CHAIN REJECT

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A local market owner who staged a "1945 prices" beef sale earlier this week sold meat which had been rejected by a large supermarket chain because of a refrigeration failure during shipment from Texas, a Pittsburgh newspaper reported today.

Nearly 50,000 pounds of beef was sold Monday and Tuesday for as little as 69 cents a pound at the New Diamond Market, owned by Charles Glick.

The Post-Gazette quoted sources as saying Glick purchased 35,570 pounds of meat from Baltimore and Ohio Railroad salvage sale after the Greater Atlantic and Pacific Tea Co. rejected the order shipped to its Youngstown, Ohio, plant.

Apparently, the newspaper said, a refrigeration unit on a tractor-trailer in which the meat was shipped stopped working for a time, causing temperatures in the trailer to rise.

Federal inspectors, however, said the meat had not spoiled, the Post-Gazette said.

The paper said Glick freely admitted making the purchase, and said United States department of agriculture agents inspected the beef upon its arrival in Pennsylvania and pronounced it "wholesome."

Whaler May Sail After 100 Years Under Arctic Ice

NEW BEDFORD, Mass. (AP) — Alex Byron has dug through Arctic ice to find a sunken 19th-century whaler that he says he will raise and sail again in 1976 to help celebrate the 200th anniversary of United States independence.

Under 40 feet of near-freezing water in Hudson's Bay, the whaler Ansel Gibbs has lain mostly intact for nearly 101 years.

Experts told him it can't be done, he says. But he is convinced he can raise the ship and sail it back to port using much of the original sails and rigging.

Byron has already been to Hudson's Bay, where the Gibbs was wrecked in 1872. He says he will raise her next summer.

The 111-foot, three-masted whaler sailed out of New Bedford Dec. 13, 1871, with a crew of 28. It took 10 months to reach Hudson's Bay and put into the Marble Island Harbor, a tiny sheltered cove where whalers often spent the winters moored to each other.

The island is just 200 miles south of the Arctic Circle, and besides the whalers, nomadic Eskimos were the only visitors.

On Oct. 13, 1872, the Gibbs' anchor cable snapped in a storm, and she drifted onto the rocks of Dead Man's Island, where her crew escaped before she sank.

The Ansel Gibbs lay forgotten in that still, 28.5-degree water (salt water freezes at 28 degrees) until 1970, when a scuba team looking for another wreck found her.

Byron saw a newspaper story about the discovery and began to try to figure out how to raise her.

Some experts told him the ship would disintegrate when raised. They said she would need a bath of plastic to halt the breakdown of wood caulking. And even then, they said, she couldn't be sailed back.

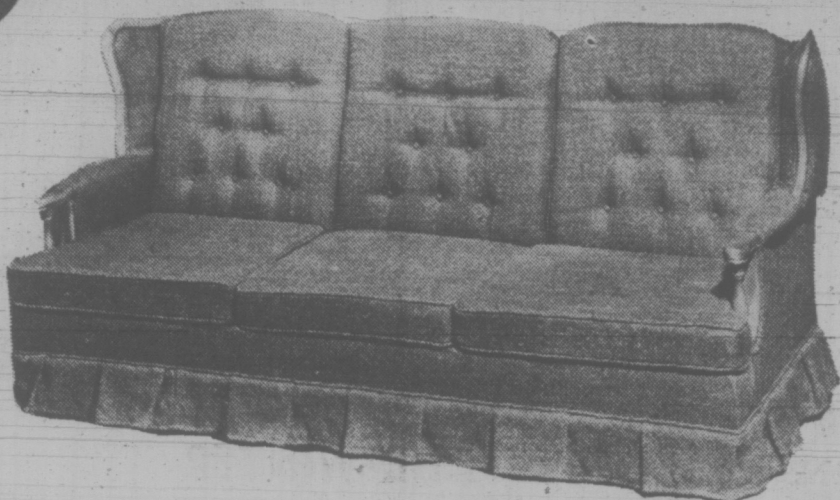

But Byron did not give up. Last summer he and a New Bedford friend, Evan Horn, set out for Hudson's Bay with three scuba divers.

they found the Ansel Gibbs resting at an angle with her stern down, in perfect condition except for part of the bow damaged on the rocks of Dead Man's Island.

"The lines are still on the ship, and they're still tied," Byron says. "The ropes, the canvas, the spars, they're all recoverable and reusable. Some of the brass is still shining."

Simplicity Key to Cooking Game

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

Our ancestors survived mainly on game — cooked in crude surroundings. Today there are still no deep secrets to cooking the game which abounds on Vancouver Island. Game could be prepared in much the same way as comparable meat and fowl — keeping in mind that wild animals aren't nearly as well fed as domestic stock and are therefore much less fatty. This is why additional fat or basting is required in many recipes.

Overcooking of any game bird or animal makes the meat tough and dried-out. And game does not need complex sauces or involved recipes — a good rule is keep it simple and you won't go wrong.

Big game such as deer and elk (or moose if you're hunting the interior mainland) can be prepared the same as beef.

Tougher portions can be ground for burger — with beef suet added for moistness.

Small animals such as rabbit and squirrel tend to have a strong gamey taste which can be taken out by parboiling.

Birds have a tendency to be dry and should be basted more frequently during cooking.

Roasts from bigger game animals should be treated the same as beef-chuck roasts or rump roasts, with slow cooking and lots of basting. Steaks or chops from the same animals should be broiled or sautéed quickly and served rare.

ROAST IN FOIL

Place a three-to-four-pound venison, moose or elk roast on a piece of heavy-duty aluminum foil. Sprinkle half a cup of diced onion mixed with two teaspoons of salt over meat. Seal roast tightly in foil and place in a shallow roasting pan. Bake in a preheated oven at 425 degrees for two to two-and-a-half hours.

Ample juice for gravy will collect in foil.

ROAST DUCK

Put half an orange inside the cavity of each duck. Place the birds in a shallow pan and roast in a 475 degree oven.

Baste ducks well with melted butter or margarine. Roast for 20 to 30 minutes. Season with salt and pepper.

FRIED RABBIT

Cut rabbits into quarters or smaller. Place pieces in a deep pot and cover with cool water to which a quarter cup of vinegar has been added. Boil for five minutes — then throw water away and start over, adding one to two teaspoons of salt. Boil until almost tender. Remove pieces from water and dip in corn meal or flour. Fry then as you would chicken.

VENISON SWISS STEAK

Pound a round steak thoroughly. Flour, salt and pepper the meat and brown in margarine or oil in a heavy frying pan. Add enough water to cover meat. Add a tin of condensed mushroom soup — or celery soup — a half cup diced onions and cook one-and-a-half hours or until tender. Add a little water if needed as it cooks. Electric frypan can be used — at 350 degree setting.

QUAIL CASSEROLE

Split eight to 12 quail — or pheasant — down the back.

Salt and dust lightly in flour. Sauté in margarine in frypan until browned — on both sides. Take birds from pan and put them in a casserole with lid. Pour drippings from the pan over birds and add half pound of sliced fresh mushrooms (or one tin, drained) and sprinkle with chopped fresh parsley or parsley flakes. Pour enough dry white wine into casserole to half-cover the birds. Cover and place in 350 degrees preheated oven for one hour. Cook 15 minutes longer if pheasant is used.

MOOSEMEAT LOAF

Mix 1½ pounds of ground moose or venison, one tablespoon of minced onion, one cup milk, one egg, 1½ teaspoons salt, half a cup dried bread crumbs. Place in a greased flat loaf pan. Bake one hour at 350 degrees.

Expatriate Falls in Love With His Own Homeland

By MAX LOW
Times Staff

Les Haines has come and gone but he'll be back.

It was a fleeting visit, really, but it was long enough to let Les know he's a Canadian, after all. And not a New Zealander or an Australian.

Les took a look at Vancouver ("a great city"), fell in love with Victoria and decided he has never really felt at home in his 33 years Down Under.

There is, Les said in an interview this week before dashing off back to Australia, "a battle going on down there at the moment."

"Either you become an Australian and give up whatever other nationality you may have, or you're a foreigner — and this is another thing that has prompted my decision to come home," Les said with great feeling.

You see, Les Haines was born in Montreal 49 years ago and left Canada with his parents at the age of 14 to settle in New Zealand. They didn't stay there, though, and Les has spent the last 14 years in Surfers Paradise, Australia's No. 1 holiday playground on the sunbaked Gold Coast, south of Brisbane.

Haines has kept his Canadian citizenship and for some time has had it in the back of his mind to return and live the rest of his life here. It needed only a 35-day excursion to North America to make him decide Victoria was "the place."

While he enjoyed Vancouver, Haines found the "leisure pace" of the Garden City much more to his liking.

"Victoria is indeed lovely and so refreshingly different from Australian towns," he said. "The intense personal pride of the people is reflected in the neatness of the homes and in the absence of litter on the streets."

In contrast, Haines said, Australians dump their garbage anywhere "and most highways are strewn with empty beer bottles and cartons."

Haines had high praise for

HAINES
... coming home

Victoria's public transport system, which he termed the best he had seen anywhere.

So now he's on his way back to sell his used car business in Surfers Paradise. And he says he'll be back in Victoria, along with his 17-year-old daughter Anne, "before Christmas."

While in Victoria, Haines stayed with his 94-year-old uncle George Seymour Bagot and Bagot's 83-year-old wife Connie, who is Haines' mother's sister, at 1014 Jasmine Avenue. He hadn't seen either of them since 1959.

When you talk about Australia to Canadians they seem mostly interested in a comparison between the cost of living in the two countries, Haines said. The steeply rising costs here appear to be a matter requiring urgent attention, he added.

The average Australian wage is $80 to $100 weekly, Haines said, and rents cost only about $16 to $30 weekly.

A few other Australian prices:

Milk costs 13 cents a pint; bread is 28 cents a large loaf; gas is 53 cents a gallon for super grades; cigarettes are 40 cents for 20; T-bone steak is 80 cents, lamb 65 cents and fish 75 cents a pound; tea is 25 to 30 cents for half a pound and bacon is 90 cents a pound.

An average home costs an Australian $20,000 and an average block of land to build a new one on costs $6,000, Haines said. The average household pays $16 every three months for electricity.

Enough of facts and figures, Haines says suddenly, and back to feelings.

"The big difference between Canada and either Austria or New Zealand is the climate and the fact that you're in another hemisphere," he said. "You just never get used to swimming or boiling in 90 degrees on Christmas Day."

"The people, too, are much more friendly here in Canada than in Australia. They're much more reserved down there and even more so in New Zealand, where they are very parochial."

"You hear a lot and read a lot, too, about the bronzed Australian beauties," Haines said with a big grin. "Well, being a girl-watcher from way back, I can tell you Canadian girls have got nothing to be ashamed of — they're every bit as good."

Other things about Canada are "great coffee, terrible beer" compared with Australia and "archaic drinking conditions here."

"One similarity between the two countries," Haines said with a laugh, "is that in Australia we're always dead against the government, whatever party is in power."

"I notice you have the same problem here..."

Women Take Over Plant In Hope of Saving Jobs

CINISELLO BALSAMO, Italy (AP) — A young woman stuffed panties into boxes while her four-year-old child played quietly at her feet.

Another woman took a break from ironing a mountain of petticoats to brew a pot of coffee for her co-workers.

They are two of 30 women running a small clothing factory in this Milan suburb. They moved in three months ago after the owners closed the factory following a long series of strikes.

"What we are doing is a sort of self-management," said Maria Chiarita, 26. "But our goal is to have the owners re-open the factory and rehire all the workers."

The five owners of the Feda plant fired all 120 women workers in mid-June on the grounds the lingerie factory was no longer competitive.

"Actually, they wanted to reduce personnel and give a lot of home work to non-union workers and open another smaller factory in the area," said Antonio Fochesato, a unionist supporting the women.

At first, their strategy was similar to that often employed in walkouts in strike-prone Italy.

They occupied the factory, spending days and nights inside, giving up their summer vacations.

But early this month, they decided to resume production to get some money to compensate for lost salaries.

"In three months we got 130,000 lire about $220 through public subscriptions in other factories and the financial assistance of the mayor. Now we want to pay our salaries through our work," said another woman worker, Grazia.

di Virgilio, 29, a mother of two.

They sewed, ironed and boxed dozens of petticoats, panties and nightgowns.

"We plan to sell them shortly, especially in factories, at very competitive prices. The income will be used for our wages," said Maria Torre, 24, another worker.

Before the shutdown, the woman's average monthly pay was $136.

"We can get a similar work is functional, even without bosses, with a big difference. It now is more human."

The workers still stay in the factory during the night "because the owners could send someone in to remove machinery."

A few husbands refused to let their wives stand watches during the night. The parents of several young girls did the same. But other husbands spend the night in the factory with their wives.

Workers also set up a playground for their children in the courtyard of the factory.

The women say they do not feel like heroines or forerunners of a new society.

"We are simply fighting for our jobs. Anybody has this right," said Rosetta di Pasquale, 35.

Most of the 120 women fired did not take part in the takeover. Some accepted new jobs, others simply stayed at home.

Doctor Urges More Outlets For Senior Sex

TORONTO (CP) — A doctor said this week there should be more provisions for sexual activity in homes for the aged.

"Perhaps one possible solution would even be to have petting rooms in much the same way as some high schools now have smoking rooms," Dr. Marion Powell said. "I suspect you would have a very long waiting list."

Powell, associate professor at University of Toronto's school of hygiene, told a convention of the Ontario Association of Homes for the Aged that repressed sexuality is one of the major problems of old age.

The design of senior citizen's buildings which emphasize shared accommodation is one of the factors that deprive elderly people of the sexual activity they still need and want," she told the 200 delegates.

"We cringe at the thought of masturbation, pornography or sexual promiscuity among the elderly," she said. "Sex among the elderly is seen almost with repulsion."

And yet studies have indicated that pleasurable responses to sex can last well into a person's 70th or 80th year, she added.

However, one delegate disagreed that homes for the aged are devoid of sexual activity.

"My problem," said the Northern Ontario delegate, "is the 70-year-old prostitute who refuses to retire."

NO SUPERSTITION exists on the Seaway Queen which has enlisted 19-year-old Janice Nichols of Toronto as ship's navigator. Superstition has it that it is bad luck to have a woman on the bridge. But this doesn't disturb the 49-man crew of the Seaway Queen, first Great Lakes cargo vessel to break the tradition. Janice is serving an apprenticeship on the vessel.

Sewage Compost Studied

BELTSVILLE, Md. (UPI) — A promising method of turning large quantities of urban sewage into compost for use on soils offers hope of easing waste disposal problems in many areas, officials said today.

"It now looks as if composting comes closer to being technically efficient, economically sound, environmentally safe, agriculturally beneficial and politically feasible than any of the alternative methods for disposing of sewage sludge," said Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz.

Butz, in a speech prepared for delivery at a demonstration of a sludge-to-compost system here, said the U.S. population is now so great that natural processes are not enough to cope with waste materials.

"So we must help nature through technology. I am confident that technology can solve many, if not all, of our current environmental problems."

The demonstration project, launched on March 30, is being carried out jointly by the Maryland Environmental Service and the agriculture department's agricultural research service (ARS) at the ARS research station.

Sludge is trucked daily from the Blue Plains Sewage Plant, which serves much of the National Capital Area, and is mixed with wood chips. A composting machine, developed by inventor Herbert Cohey and the Terex division of General Motors, mixes the material daily for several weeks, allowing the sewage to break down without producing offensive odor, and then it is cured for about a month.

After that, the recycled sewage is ready to use as a soil conditioning compost or a low-grade fertilizer. As fertilizer, it was about one-fifth to one-tenth as potent as ordinary 5-10-5 plant food.

Scientists said the demonstration shows that the cost of composting the full 550 tons of sewage sludge produced daily by the Blue Plains plant would be less than the cost of incinerating the material. The composting also eliminated the need for dumping the sludge in waterways or using it in landfills.

Future Archeologists Will Really Dig Us

Every time I run across an article relating how archeologists are excavating and interpreting a new dig, I can't help but wonder what would happen should our civilization be abruptly extinguished.

If, like those individuals in Pompeii, we were all to perish suddenly, what presumptions about 1973 society would the archeologists of 3057 AD make, based on the contents of our basement?

What would they make of the two dozen empty boxes of various sizes and shapes which I have insisted upon transporting from one house to another over the past six years? This compulsion has been difficult enough to explain to my husband and the moving men; archeologists would undoubtedly jump to the conclusion that we were a race of box worshippers.

And what possible explanation would cover three blonde wigs on white wig stands, other than the obvious inference that art of our empty paper box religion demanded the ritual decapitation of albino virgins?

The box full of the children's Halloween costumes and masks would naturally enough be assumed to contain sacred garments used in these pagan rituals, especially in view of the fact that our daughter, who, suffered a spectacular nosebleed after being hit with a taffy apple last year, left indelible stains all over Little Bo-Peep.

Upon discovering my long white wedding gown, they would assume that they had stumbled on the sacrificial garment itself, probably noting in passing that our culture obviously possessed an inexplicable admiration for short, fat virgins.

As confusing as it would be for anyone to excavate our basement, think of the furor should they inadvertently choose Disneyland as the site of their archeological dig. Undoubtedly they would report that the citizens of 1973 AD were a race of giant three-fingered mice.

If you don't know what nammies, coffin nails, smacks, Mary Janes or copilots are, you are not "with it." All are slang names of some frequently abused drugs.

The 10-page folder "Drug Reference Chart" answers many of the questions people ask about the non-medical use of drugs. It tells you, for instance, that the psychological effects of drug abuse depends on various factors, such as the physical size of the taker, method of administration (taken orally, by injection, etc.) and if the drug is taken in combination with other drugs.

The chart lists the various drug groups, including hallucinogens, depressants, and tranquillizers, and gives examples of each. It also indicates their various slang names and their pharmacological and legal classifications. It then reviews the medical uses of these drugs and with physical symptoms and behaviour patterns they produce if abused.

Finally, it lists major health hazards. For instance, glue sniffing can result in moderate psychological dependence and impaired judgment. Furthermore, it can induce aggressive behaviour and other antisocial acts. Even worse, it can lead to permanent damage to the brain, liver and kidneys. An overdose can result in accidental death.

Ten Commandments

DEAR READERS: Once, in all humility and with no intended irreverence to Moses, I published my "Ten Commandments For Wives." Here is the companion piece, "Ten Commandments For Husbands."

1. Thou shalt put thy wife before thy mother, thy father, thy daughter, and thy son, for she is thy life-long companion.

2. Abuse not thy body either with excessive food, tobacco, or drink, that thy days may be many and healthful in the presence of thy loved ones.

3. Permit neither thy business, nor thy hobby to make of thee a stranger to thy children, for the most precious gift a man giveth his family is his time.

4. Forget not the virtue of cleanliness.

5. Make not thy wife a beggar, but share willingly with her thy worldly goods.

6. Forget not to say, "I love you." For even tho thy love be constant, thy wife doth yearn to hear the words.

7. Remember that the approval of thy wife is worth more than the admiring glances of a hundred strangers. Cleave unto her, and forsake all others.

8. Keep thy home in good repair, for out of it cometh the joys of thy old age.

9. Forgive with grace. For who among us does not need to be forgiven?

10. Honor the Lord thy God all the days of thy life, and thy children will rise up and call thee blessed.

DEAR ABBY: I recently graduated from high school and thought this problem would be over, but I was wrong.

You see, my mother was never married, and she has never discussed the reason with me. In school when we had to fill-out forms, where it had, "Father's name" I always made one up because I was too ashamed to leave it blank.

Now I have the same problem again when I apply for a job.

There are other places where father's name is asked, too; hospital admissions, and insurance forms, to name a few.

What do I say when someone hands a form back to me and says, "you forgot to fill in your father's name?" Thank you kindly. Fatherless Girl.

DEAR GIRL: It's nobody's business. I checked with the Census Bureau. They referred me to the Human Rights Office, whose spokesman said, "Just tell her to leave the space blank."

If someone hands it back to you, saying, "You forgot," and say, "No, I didn't" and hand it right back.

CONFIDENTIAL TO M.N.: No, I am not encouraging permissiveness, but what has been done is done, so why carry a grudge for a lifetime? The past is but a bucket of ashes.

WITH THE LOVELY DAYS OF AUTUMN isn't it pleasant to relax with friends over a cup of tea, hot buttered toast or scones, jam and marmalade? CHIVERS PURE JAMS AND MARMALADES have graced the tea tables of Canadians for generations... and with good reason. We know we can depend on the pureness and quality of every one of their eight delicious flavours. I frequently serve Chivers Ginger Marmalade — not only at tea — but as a condiment with chicken, veal or lamb. As an after-school snack, children love Chivers Raspberry, Strawberry or Apricot jam. You'll enjoy them, too!

IF YOU HAVE BEEN LOOKING for a fast, economical way to clean upholstery, you should try a BISSELL UPHOLSTERY SHAMPOO KIT. The kit includes an applicator that lasts indefinitely and sufficient concentrated shampoo to clean a regular sofa and two lounge chairs beautifully. Bissell Upholstery Shampoo is easy-to-use... dries quickly... and is safe on all colour fast fabrics. And it is equally effective on vinyl and car upholstery, too. By following simple directions I found dull, dirty upholstered fabrics looked bright and new again. Bissell Upholstery Shampoo Kits... and 12 oz. Upholstery Shampoo refills... are available at hardware, grocery and department stores.

TIME AFTER TIME... readers have thanked me for suggesting DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS... when they have had a nagging back-ache and tired feeling. You see, Dodd's contain ingredients that bring effective relief by gently stimulating the kidneys to help relieve back-ache and that worn-out feeling. It was interesting to learn from a friend that Dodd's Kidney Pills are also very helpful during menstrual periods. "Dodd's Kidney Pills help relieve excess retention of body fluids resulting in bloating, swelling caused by urinary irritation during the menstrual period," she said. Another reason, I'm sure, why millions of people found relief with Dodd's!

LIKE SO MANY PEOPLE... I always make sure I have DR. FOWLER'S EXTRACT OF WILD STRAWBERRY on my shelf. Then, if one of my family suddenly develops the nausea, cramps and weakness of diarrhea, Dr. Fowler's is right there to help bring gentle, soothing relief. Formulated from roots and herbs, it quickly relieves embarrassing symptoms and restores intestinal balance. No one is immune... we all tend to over-indulge at times... even a change in diet or water can be the culprit. Whatever, Dr. Fowler's has helped over 6 generations of Canadian adults and children... the best recommendation I can think of!

WASHINGTON (WP) — Intellectual talents of North American women are being wasted on a large scale, to the point where women account for the largest untapped supply of superior intelligence on the continent, the Carnegie Commission on Higher Education said this week.

In an exhaustive study of opportunities for women in higher education, the commission said women face a host of barriers along the educational ladder. These range from female stereotyping in grade school to deliberate exclusions from some college facilities.

In post secondary education faculty, the commission said, women are both under-represented and under-paid, earning on the average between $1,500 and $2,000 less than men in comparable situations.

It added it is unlikely that a reversal of inequalities in the addition of women to college and university faculties can be achieved soon.

Despite pressure from the federal government, the number of women faculty members is still low and the pool of qualified applicants limited, the commission said. In addition, enrolment growth in higher education has been declining for the last few years, causing a subsequent decrease in the number of new positions each year.

The situation is not entirely unlike that of trying to add to the number of women railroad conductors... it will take until the year 2000, under reasonable assumptions, before women are likely to be included in the national professoriate in approximately the same proportions as they are in the total labor force.

Even if colleges and universities put a freeze on hiring of all men and hired only women to their faculties, it would be the mid 1980s before women constituted half the faculty in higher education, the commission said.

At each level of advancement within the educational system, the percentage of women included declines. They are 50.4 per cent of high school graduates, 43.1 per cent of college graduates, 24 per cent of faculty, 13.4 per cent of those holding doctors degrees and 8.6 per cent of the full professors.

At the graduate school level, the commission argued, many faculty members display negative attitudes towards women. For many of their students, this serves to increase emotional stress and it decreases their commitment to remain in school.

To help correct the inequalities, the commission urged stepped-up efforts to locate talented women and improve their training. It noted that women are now on college and university faculties at about half their extent of participation in the general labor force.

At the pre-college level, the commission urged more mathematical training for girls to permit them to enter fields often thought to be reserved for males, engineering for example. It also called for career counselling free of outmoded concepts of male and female careers.

It also suggested at the college level, efforts to increase the pool of women Ph.D. holders and increased opportunities for women to return to college for advanced training after they have started families.

A reduction in the severity of anti-nepotism rules that bar a husband and wife from serving on the same faculty, increased child care facilities and allowing more part-time appointments for women with children would also increase women's participation in higher education at the faculty level, the commission said.

TORONTO (CP) — High food prices? It's all in your mind.

"Food continues to be a bargain," J. B. J. Williams, public relations manager for Dominion Stores Ltd., says in a report to store managers to help them deal with complaining customers.

Dominion admits that the weekly food bill for a family of four, $13.76 in 1953, was $33.24 in the January-March period of 1973, the most recent period for which Statistics Canada has compiled figures.

But read on, complaining customer.

Dominion says the number of working hours an average industrial worker needed to pay his food bill fell from 9.6 in 1953 to 8.4 in early 1973.

That was because the average industrial wage went to $157.80 in early 1973 from $37.53 in 1953.

Milk went to 37 cents a quart from 24 cents in the period studied, but the time it took to earn enough to buy a quart fell from nine minutes to six.

Beef sirloin, 79 cents a pound in 1953, went to $1.59 early this year, but the time it took to earn that much fell from 33 minutes to 24.

Feel better?
Meanwhile a spokesman for the meat industry said Tuesday it is impossible to sell food so cheaply that the poorest Canadians can afford it easily.

Graeme Hedley, general manager of the Ontario Beef Improvement Association, told an Ontario government conference on food prices that the solution is to raise the incomes of the poor rather than attempt to keep food prices artificially low.

High Prices? It's All In Your Mind

100 Years Without Drink

TEMPERANCE, Mich. (UPI) — One hundred years is long enough for any man to go without a drink, much less an entire town.

With that in mind, grandmother Ida Tolly says she plans to wet down the Michigan town whose chief asset—or fault, depending on how you grip your glass—is in its name: Temperance.

The widowed grandmother, a 39-year resident of the state's dry spot, says she plans to sell alcohol on a carry-out basis from her market in the centre of town.

"It's not a little town any more," Mrs. Tolly explained. "It's a perfectly legal business and it makes good business."

"Why should people have to drive a long way to get a six-pack?"

Except for a short period in 1935, Temperance has been faithful to its name ever since it was founded in the 1880's. Early settlers of the town Lewis Ansted and his wife Marietta, a Women's Christian Temperance Union devotee, insisted the town be virgin to alcohol.

The Ansteds named the town and left explicit instructions that "no intoxicating beverages shall be bought, sold or manufactured on this land."

Mrs. Tolly is quick to point out, however, that the deed to her land is one of the few in the city with no restrictive clauses attached.

She said she would have applied for the licence sooner, but a former state law says no liquor sales can be made within 500 feet of a church. Her store is located 200 feet from the former site of the Temperance Baptist Church.

Some of the townsfolk are siding with past history in the attempt by Mrs. Tolly to tamper with Temperance.

The name Temperance should be reason enough to keep alcohol out of here, said Ransom Brunt, a grandson of the Ansteds.

Image of Women Called Distorted

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Women get inferior medical service because "the image of women that most doctors hold is an extremely distorted and denigrating one," says Hilda Thomas, a director of the Vancouver General Hospital.

In an interview at the Central Interior New Democratic Party regional council conference here, Ms. Thomas said the medical profession is male-dominated and women doctors must become more numerous before service to women will improve.

She said women hold a low view of themselves because of the opinion of doctors.

Ms. Thomas also said abortions should be a matter between a woman and her doctor, not a legal or moral question. She said women who do not want to bear a child "should have the right, in consultation with their doctor, to terminate the pregnancy."

And provincial Health Minister Dennis Coe told the conference the B.C. and the federal government are trying to find alternatives to established medical practices and to cut costs.

SOLUTION FRIDAY

GARDENING
hilda beastallIt's Almost Too Late To Plant Small Bulbs

When gardeners get around to thinking of bulb planting it is already past the time for putting in the smallest kinds.

Just what is meant by smallest bulbs is not easy to define, though a blanket statement might be that the smaller the bulbs the sooner they must be put into the soil.

Not only spring flowering bulbs are included but those beginning to bloom normally here outdoors soon after the beginning of the year.

Crocuses for blooming from now until February should already be in the ground; the first Crocus speciosus popped up its slender blue tube this week after a shower.

So for planting now we start with Eranthis hyemalis, the winter-aconite, whose cheerful buttercup-like bloom opens close to the cold earth in the first mild spell after Christmas. The corms are less than a dime-size and resent disturbance so may take two years to re-establish. However, sending is generous and a colony soon develops in a winter-sunny, sheltered spot.

The genus Scilla is varied enough to include squills and English bluebells, but it is Scilla sibirica which has a lovely rich blue in the early year as a fine contrast to the white of the snowdrop, Galanthus nivalis.

A bed near the home entrance door where it may also be enjoyed from house windows is the ideal place for a first planting of these small early flowering bulbs which increase so readily. They must not be disturbed, and their foliage must be allowed to wither before being "tidied".

With protection from shrubs planted nearby on the north-east side of the bed to filter the worst freezing winter-wind, the bulbs will thrive.

Handweeding through spring and summer, and perhaps a few flowering protulaca seedlings growing on the surface will keep the bed presentable.

Chionodoxa lucillae is another small bulb for late winter bloom, bearing sky blue starry blossoms close to the wet soil. Blooming with winter crocuses of the C. chrysanthus species you have a picture of charm and gaiety to anticipate every year.

When you get the bulbs, plant them in the prepared bed the same day. They have already been out of the ground too long. If you must delay, open the bags and set them on the floor in a cool place. They must not dry out further in the warm house.

Winter and early spring can be beautiful if you get busy now. Once planted in a suitable place, not overcrowded with rampantly growing and encroaching plants, these small bulbs return for many years of cheery delight with little attention after the initial preparation and setting into place.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

The late Al Sobel, who passed away in 1972, was the world's most celebrated tournament director. Due to his time-consuming job of directing, he had very little time for playing bridge. But on those rare occasions when he played, he invariably came up with a hand that was off the beaten path. Today's deal was one of his favorites.

The hand arose in a team-of-four match many years ago. Sobel was sitting in the East seat.

North-South vulnerable. East deals.

tion to his teammates (who held the North-South cards was: "What did you do on Board No. 2, the one where East-West can make a non-vulnerable small slam in hearts?"

The answer broke Sobel's heart: "We were minus 1010."

"What happened?" asked Sobel.

"Nothing unusual, really," came the answer. "East played at six hearts and the opening lead was the king of spades. East ruffed, drew trumps, and cashed in three top clubs. He then entered dummy with a trump, and discarded his three remaining clubs. So he made an over-trick, for a score of 1010."

Thus, by the slender margin of 10 points, Sobel's team lost the board — and the loss was probably a contributing factor in Sobel's decision to turn to tournament directing, instead of tournament playing.

Sheriff Nabs Cruise Ship

VANCOUVER (CP) — The luxury cruise ship Xanadu was arrested Wednesday when it arrived at Port of Vancouver to disembark holidaymakers from an Alaskan cruise. The seizure is part of a move to have the vessel sold for an alleged $2,456,000 mortgage debt.

The vessel, which has been sailing from Vancouver all summer in an Alaska cruise program, was arrested by sheriff's officers following an order obtained from federal court here by West Line Inc., of Panama.

The ship is owned and operated by Donald L. Ferguson Cruises Ltd., a firm registered in Liberia which has offices in Seattle and Vancouver.

Documents filed at federal court by Vancouver lawyer Hugh Legg said West Line will seek an order today giving it possession of the ship on claims that Ferguson Cruises had defaulted on a $2,155,000 mortgage held by West Line.

West Line alleges that the firm operating the cruise ship defaulted on the mortgage by failing to pay its debts as they matured.

The company is seeking an order which would allow West Line to pay off the master and crew of the Xanadu and repatriate all but those who may be required to look after the ship.

West Line will also ask for an order authorizing an appraisal of the ship and an order for its sale.

Lights Go Out

A power blackout hit parts of Victoria and Saanich for more than four hours Wednesday after a fire broke out on top of a power pole at Douglas and Gorge.

The fire started at 3 p.m. and B.C. Hydro officials said wide areas were affected. Power was quickly restored to most areas by switching circuits.

For homes and businesses along Douglas from Hillside to Burnside, and up Burnside to Tillicum, however, it was 7:15 p.m. before there was power.

Traffic lights in the area were also out of operation and city police directed traffic during the afternoon rush hour.

In another incident Wednesday, a short in the Woolco department store transformer on Douglas caused an unexpected store closure from 10 a.m. until noon.

General manager R. J. Dittberner said the store was running on partial power for three hours Tuesday evening and the transformer was shut off in the morning for repairs.

Other stores in the shopping centre were not affected.

Brezhnev Hits Back At Western Critics

MOSCOW (WP) — Leonid Brezhnev, the leader of the Soviet Communist Party, gave a sternly worded speech on foreign affairs in Sofia, Bulgaria, Wednesday, indirectly but clearly responding to recent Western criticism of the Soviet Union.

Abandoning the optimistic tone of his recent public statements, Brezhnev said "ill conceived propaganda campaigns... aimed at sowing mistrust in the policy of the U.S.S.R." were actually meant to hinder detente.

Those who suggest pressuring the Communist countries "for some concessions" in current East-West talks are pursuing a "naive... unseemly mercantile approach to the question," Brezhnev said.

If there is to be a "new system of international relations," Brezhnev said, it must be based on "the principles of sovereignty and non-interference in internal affairs."

In these and other passages, Brezhnev appeared to be reacting to foreign criticism of Soviet domestic policy, particularly the treatment of intellectual dissidents.

Other sections of the Soviet leader's speech could be interpreted as attempts to persuade his colleagues in Moscow of his own unswerving dedication to a "socialist policy" which will not compromise on basic ideological issues with the Capitalist powers.

In an ambiguous sentence, perhaps intended for both

Western statesmen and some of his own colleagues in the Kremlin, Brezhnev noted that the building of a new world order "requires an absolutely different approach, different methods and perhaps a different psychology than those that existed previously."

Brezhnev bitterly attacked "the bloody crimes committed by Chilean reactionaries" in the recent coup.

Strike Likely At B.C. Hydro

VANCOUVER (CP) — A representative of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers (IBEW), Local 258, warned the government a strike by B.C. Hydro workers is imminent because a recent wage offer from the provincially-owned utility is unsatisfactory.

Dusty Greenwell told the Vancouver and District Labor Council B.C. Hydro is offering nine to 12 per cent for each year of a two-year contract. The union's demands have not been made public.

"You may expect the Hydro workers on strike in the very near future," he said.

The IBEW's 2,400 members voted Sept. 11 to strike but such action has been put off while mediator Clark Gilmour attempts to arrange a settlement.

"We can't even get our grievances to B.C. Hydro chairman David Cass-Beggs, who is supposed to be a socialist and a friend of the people," local president Bob Lundy said.

Car Driver Killed

CHEMAINUS — The driver of a car which collided head-on with a flatbed trailer truck Wednesday was killed instantly and a passenger in the car is in poor condition in hospital.

Chemainus RCMP would not release the names of the driver or passenger pending notification of next-of-kin.

The accident occurred on the Trans-Canada Highway near Fullers Lake Road.

Police said the truck driver, Don Cole, of Duncan, swerved out of his lane to miss a van which was overturned on the road in front of him. The van was driven by Leonidos Peter Limberis of Ladysmith.

As the truck veered into the southbound lane of traffic, it collided head-on with the car.

Cole and Limberis were taken to Chemainus General Hospital but were later released.

BARGAINING AGENT CERTIFIED AT VGH

The Health Sciences Association of B.C. has been certified as bargaining agent for a group of employees at Victoria General Hospital, it was disclosed today.

The bargaining group includes para-medical professional groups — physiotherapists, medical record librarians, dietitians, medical social workers, hospital pharmacists, occupational therapists, remedial gymnasts, radiological technicians and medical technologists, the Labor Relations Board reported.

The board also redefined and narrowed the bargaining group of the Hospital Employees Union, Local 180, at Victoria General.

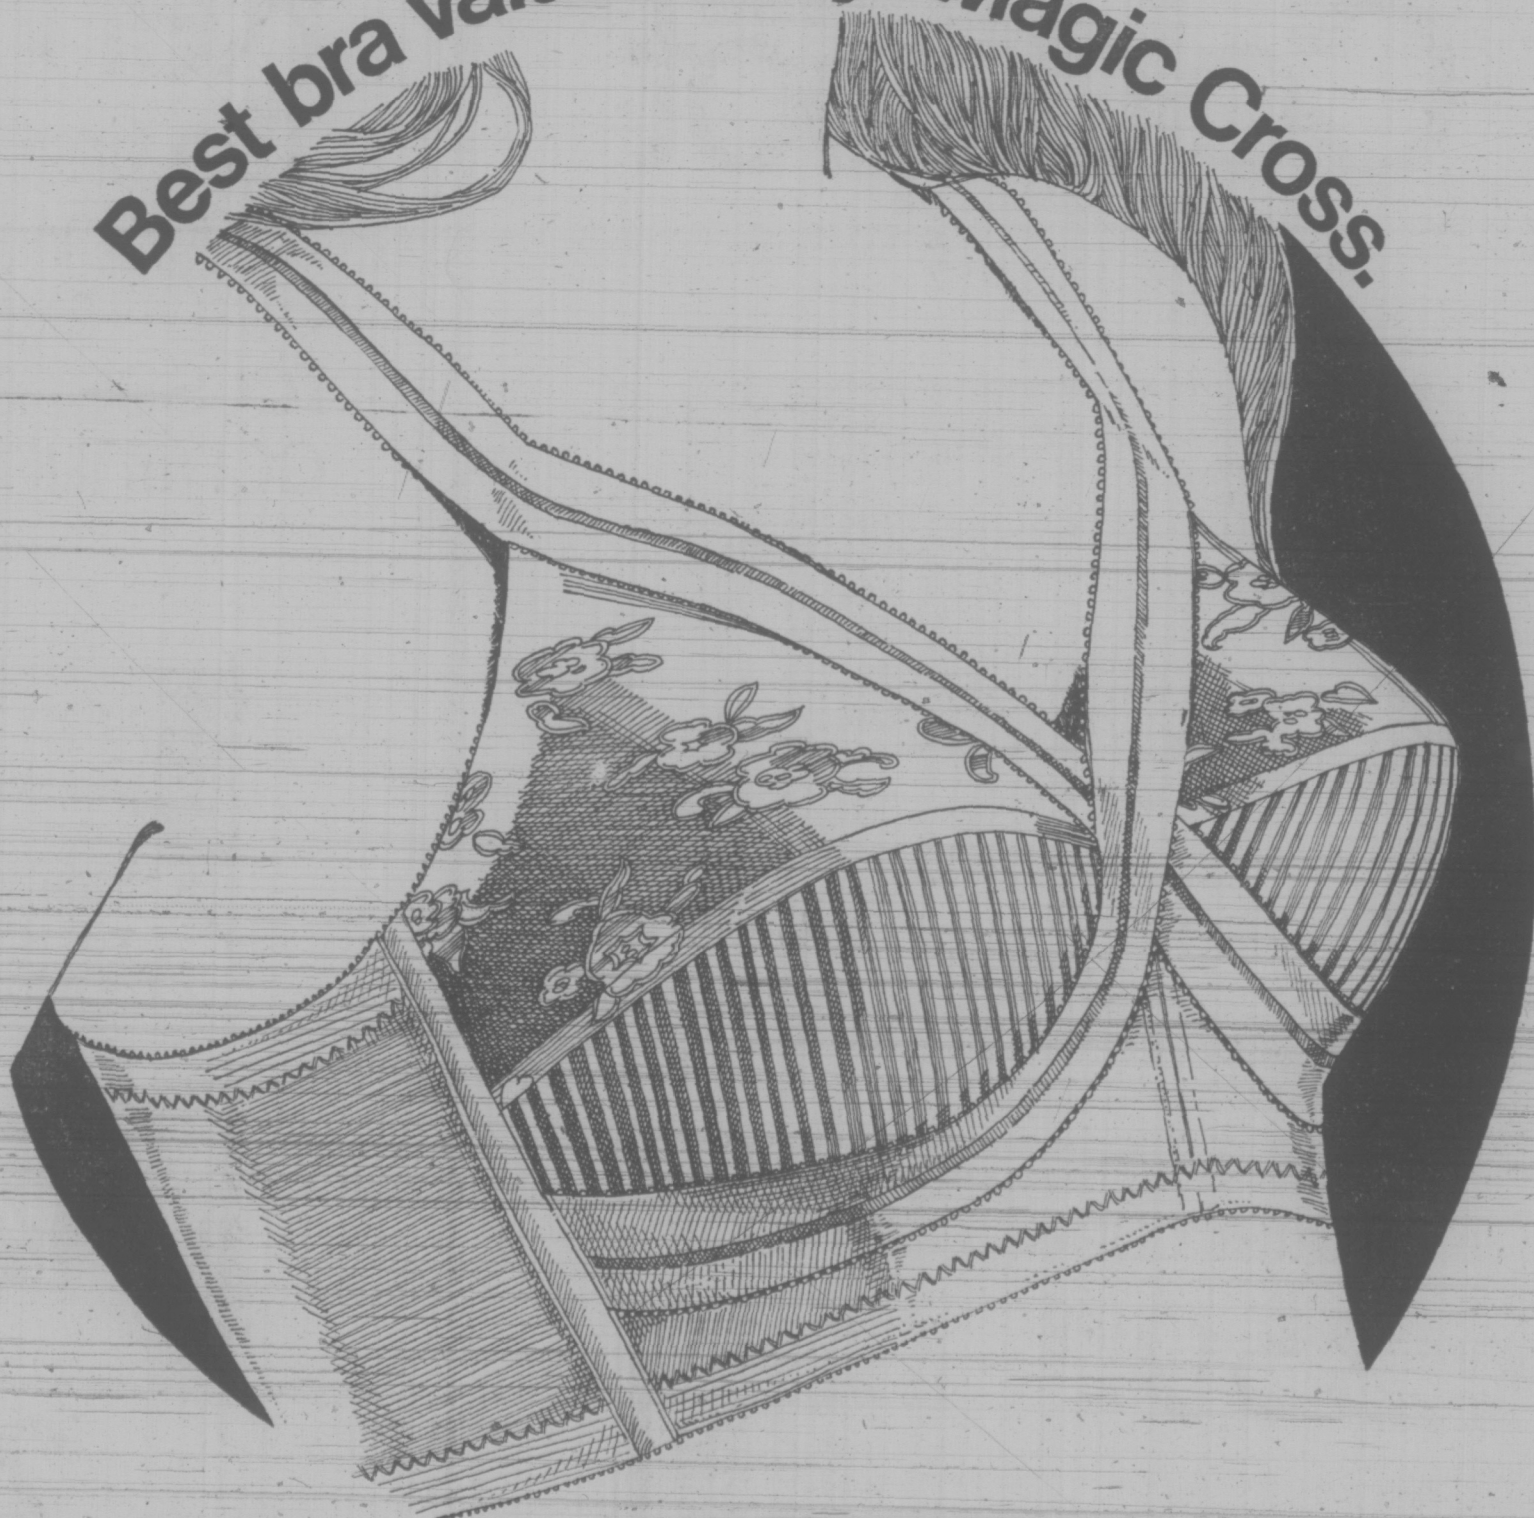

It cancelled a certification dating to 1958 for laboratory and radiological technicians and described the union's bargaining unit as all employees except graduate nurses, para-medical professional groups, engineers and firemen.

Claws Show as Democrats Meet

By DAVID S. BRODER

WASHINGTON (WP) — The Democratic party, flushed with a new affluence after its successful telethon, today enters a four-day period that threatens to be the most turbulent since its 1972 convention.

The party's delegate selection commission — successor to the McGovern commission of four years ago — begins Friday a three-day debate on the thorny issues of quotas, proportional representation, and automatic delegates.

Today, party chairman Robert Strauss, fearful of the divisive potential of that debate, is to make what associates call the toughest speech he's ever delivered, warning that the American public will not tolerate a lot of fussing and squabbling by the Democrats.

Strauss was expected to tee off on warring factions that threaten to make the delegate selection commission meeting a battleground for refighting the pre-convention struggle of 1972.

Whether his warning will cool off the combatants, who have been caucusing as if for a nomination fight, is problematical. But Strauss is reliably reported to be ready to stake his job on his ability to ride herd on this dispute.

The Dallas lawyer, who has been serving as party chairman since last December, has told friends he is ready to cash in his chips and go home, if this weekend's meetings show no disposition to heed his pleas for harmony and restraint.

Strauss is in a strong position, following the $5.25 million telethon last Saturday which is expected to net enough to erase the last of the Democratic National Committee's carryover debt from the 1968 campaign and to enrich state party coffers.

But whether he has the leverage to moderate the disputes in the meetings that start Friday is uncertain.

The chairman of the delegate selection commission is Baltimore city councilwoman Barbara Mikulski, who is making her debut in national politics in this high-pressure assignment. Mikulski was named co-chairman of the commission last year by Strauss' predecessor, Jean Westwood. Strauss approved her elevation to the commission chairmanship, following the resignation of United Auto Workers' president Leonard Woodcock, but has been privately critical of her handling of the preliminaries to this first full meeting of the commission.

Mikulski has had several clashes already with the AFL-CIO's top political operative, Alexander Barkan, who has accused her of being a representative of the new politics forces that nominated George McGovern last year.

In an interview last week, Mikulski said she was a victim of mistaken identity. The myth is being created that the reforms in the party rules penalized regulars and aided insurgents, she said. Well, I was one of those elected officials that didn't get there. It wasn't the new rules that kept me out. I went down on the Muskies' ship, so tough 'munchies' for me.

The real problem is that the people who were used to controlling the convention found they could not control it. So, they made McGovern the scapegoat.

I watched the convention on television, she said, and I loved it. But I was bothered by the attitude toward my constituents in Baltimore. Throughout the whole convention, I didn't hear any concern for the blue-collar workers — particularly the ethnics — until Ted Kennedy referred to 'old settlers and new immigrants.' I want the doors opened to everyone. That, to me, is the Spirit of '76.

Mikulski also asserted that her commission has begun to move toward consensus on the rules controversies in the course of six regional hearings held during the summer months.

Region Land Reserve Hearing Delayed

The public hearing into the Capital Regional District's agricultural land reserve plan was set Wednesday for Oct. 29 at 9 a.m. in the district's offices at 524 Yates.

The plan, which the region must prepare under the Land Commission Act and which will be finally approved by the commission was prepared during the summer.

A deadline of Oct. 1 for the public hearing cannot be met because of the time already taken and regional board chairman Jim Campbell said the provincial government is being asked to grant an extension.

He said in an interview after Wednesday's board meeting he is confident the request for an extension will be granted.

The board dealt with the last of the principles to be incorporated into the plan, which were deferred from a special day-long meeting Aug. 24.

Central Saanich sought exclusion from the plan of 1,500 acres of "rural" areas which it said could not be considered agricultural land but which the regional district's planning department wanted included. About 4,000 acres of Central Saanich are to be included in the plan.

But after more than an hour of debate, most of the 1,500 acres ended up in the plan.

The board had earlier agreed to exclude land purchased, zoned, designated or slated for urban use under a community plan when it is demonstrated the land is required for urban use in the next five years.

And Wednesday, the board exempted from the plan land within a sewer enterprise area or land where public investment has been made to provide sanitary sewerage facilities to present or future residential areas.

Regional planner Tony Roberts said in an interview that of the 1,500 acres in Central Saanich under debate, about 250 acres in sewer-proposed areas will be excluded but the remainder will be included in the agricultural land reserve plan.

Central Saanich Mayor Archie Galbraith withdrew a motion to exclude the 1,500 acres.

Campbell said the proposal may "frustrate" the provincial legislation and to pass the motion would be "quite contrary" to it. Galbraith said he didn't want to be "any part of legislation which will not work."

Several public information meetings will be arranged by the regional district prior to the scheduled Oct. 29 public hearing on the plan.

NEW PRESIDENT of the Victoria branch of the Royal Conservatory of Music, Toronto, Alumni Association, is Mrs. Ben Levinson, well known Victoria soprano. Mrs. Levinson will preside at the season's first meeting Monday at 8 p.m. at home of Mrs. Gordon Bertram, 1612 Paul's Terrace. Conservatory graduates wishing to join may do so at this meeting.

View Royal Petitioners Sure of Sewer Poll

Referendum approval by View Royal property owners will be necessary before local sewers can be installed, the Capital Regional District board was told Wednesday.

District executive director Dennis Young said the minister of health has certain powers if health hazards exist but the minister of municipal affairs has no powers at present to order sewers.

He was replying to a petition from View Royal residents in support of local sewers.

Petition spokesman Lyle Kahl, 1621 Island Highway, said his group thought the regional board could act on its own or the minister of municipal affairs could act.

In his submission, he said 75 per cent of the electorate were contacted and 66.5 per cent signed the petition. A significant majority of all people in View Royal favor correcting the existing sewage problem, he said.

(Sewage disposal now is via septic tanks and there have been complaints in the past that the rocky terrain is insufficient to absorb waste water).

Petitioners asked the regional board to declare View Royal as a "specified area" for the purpose of providing a sewage collection system.

The board agreed to refer the request to its local works and services committee.

Commonwealth Needs Monarchy—Lord Astor

The monarchy is a unifying force that still works despite the changing nature of the Commonwealth, Lord Astor of Hever said in Victoria Wednesday night.

He said he felt "on rather thin ice" praising the Queen in Canada because not everyone in this country supported the idea of a monarchy.

However, many are being reawakened to its value particularly after the successful Commonwealth conference in Ottawa this year.

He told a meeting of the Royal Commonwealth Society in Bay Street Armory many, who had been lukewarm, left the Ottawa meeting as dedicated converts.

These included Prime Minister Trudeau and Prime Minister Edward Heath of Britain, Lord Astor said.

Some might have been pessimistic about the future of the Commonwealth after the Singapore meeting in 1971 but the Ottawa conference produced a new spirit of enthusiasm and a sort of a reawakening, Astor said.

Leaders of the 33 Commonwealth countries were particularly impressed that each one of them had a 15-minute private interview with the Queen during the Ottawa conference.

"She is an intelligent, hard-working lady and she represents 1,000 years of history and tradition," he said.

Lord Astor, president of the Commonwealth Press Union, is president of Times Newspapers Ltd. of London.

He will speak in a number of cities across Canada during the next 25 days. With him is Lady Astor and his daughter, the Honorable Sarah Astor.

He said the Commonwealth began as a small group of white dominions but changed in 1947 with the partition of India and Pakistan. India set the tone for the new Commonwealth by forming a republic but recognizing the Queen as head of the Commonwealth.

Now 18 of the members are republics, 15 are monarchies and all recognize the unifying role of the Queen, he said.

Astor said the Commonwealth has been further enhanced by the entry of the United Kingdom into the European Common Market.

The move strengthens Britain and makes Europe more aware of the importance of the Commonwealth. He said he was confident Europe would take necessary steps to ensure the continuing viability of the international ties.

He said the new Commonwealth covers 10 million square miles on six continents around five oceans and includes 800 million people.

The speaker noted the Commonwealth Society was in the midst of a drive to increase membership and that the Victoria group now has a total of 180, up from 150 a year ago.

It was an advantageous time to reach out for new members, particularly young people, building on the spirit of the Ottawa conference.

He said there was a revival of interest in the Commonwealth among young people in Britain, although this had not been adequately reflected in the media so far.

Today Astor is in Vancouver to address a meeting of the lower mainland branch.

Astor was born in 1918 as the eldest son of the first Baron of Hever, Col. John Jacob Astor, who was chief proprietor of The Times of London from 1922 to 1966.

He became Lord Astor upon his father's death in 1971.

He was elected chairman of the Commonwealth Press Union in 1959 and became president, succeeding his father, in 1971.

and his attorney says he will appeal the decision to the Pennsylvania supreme court. Mark Goldberg of Pittsburgh said he would ask the state's high court to overturn Washington County Judge Charles Sweet's sentence "forthwith" on grounds of trial error and because the death penalty has been declared unconstitutional. Sweet sentenced Martin in the county court — just a few miles from where the Yablonskis were shot to death in their rural home — despite a U.S. supreme court decision last year which struck down state capital punishment laws. Martin, 24, of Cleveland, attired in a purple T-shirt and wearing rose-colored sunglasses, showed no emotion when the sentence was pronounced by Sweet. Sweet said it was "ascertained I am in error" and the death sentence was overturned. He would sentence Martin to three consecutive terms of life imprisonment for the slayings.

NAPLES, Italy — Antonio Bifulco was arrested Wednesday on drunken disturbance charges, but his lawyer plans a unique defence. He blamed it all on cholera and television.

A lawyer for Bifulco said he would argue in court that his client heard on television that wine and beer offered a degree of protection against Italy's current cholera outbreak. The lawyer said the program did not say how much wine should be taken, and his client did not know a quart was too much.

MANCHESTER, England — A 19-year-old Canadian student hospitalized with suspected rabies today received a clean bill of health from doctors, a royal infirmary said today.

He said Robert Woodfine would probably be released later today. Police mounted a nationwide hunt for Woodfine earlier this week after Canadian authorities confirmed that a bat, which bit him shortly before leaving Hamilton, Ont., to tour England, was a rabies carrier.

Woodfine spotted his name in a newspaper Wednesday and reported to the infirmary for treatment.

LONDON — Princess Anne and her husband-to-be, Capt. Mark Phillips, may not be able to move into their new home on the grounds of Sandhurst Military Academy because of the security risk.

A spokesman at Buckingham Palace said Wednesday night the matter was "under discussion" following reports that police had asked the Queen not to let her daughter live in a house which could become a target for bombers and snipers.

Scotland Yard would not deny or confirm the reports, but an army spokesman at Sandhurst also said the matter was "under discussion."

GREENCASTLE, Pa. — Robert Beaver of Greencastle was charged with disorderly conduct Wednesday after he brought his horse into the Hotel Greencastle's tap room.

The bartender asked Beaver to remove the horse and during a sharp exchange of words the horse did what many animals do when they get excited.

The outraged bartender gathered up the evidence in a plastic bag which hotel officials took to justice of the peace Robert Eberly, who handed down the charge against Beaver.

OROVILLE, Calif. — Old-time cowboy Alvin Alonzo Wetmore, who took "a notion" to live and at age 101 was still packing away "all the bourbon I can get my hands on," is dead at 102.

Friends in this northern California community said the former ox cart and bull driver succumbed during the week-end.

Born Jan. 28, 1871, near Chippewa Falls, Wis., Wetmore ran away from home at the age of nine and wound up in the Oklahoma territory, where friendly cowboys took him in.

Asked during a birthday interview when he turned 101 if he still drank, Wetmore replied, "all the bourbon I can get my hands on."

He also said he smoked a pack of cigarettes daily, but just "took a notion" to live a long life.

REDWOOD CITY, Calif. — A San Mateo county jail inmate was allowed to visit with his German Shepherd Wednesday because the dog missed him and was slowing starving to death.

The two-year-old dog, named "Max," wagged its tails, licked its master's face and quickly devoured a big hunk of roast beef. The meat was the first food Max had eaten in a week.

The prisoner, Michael Winter, 27, Sebastopol, Calif., was jailed a week ago for violation of parole.

CHARGE RILES FDR's SON

WASHINGTON (WP) — Elliot Roosevelt, the second son of the late president Franklin D. Roosevelt, Wednesday demanded a public apology from a senate investigations subcommittee for linking him to a $100,000 payoff to assassinate the prime minister of the Bahamas Islands.

Louis Mastrigna, a convicted stock swindler, testified on Tuesday that Roosevelt tried to buy a murder contract on Bahamian Prime Minister Lynden Pindling because Pindling refused to grant a gambling license to an associate of Miami mobster Meyer Lansky.

"I have never met Meyer Lansky. I have never had anything to do with Meyer Lansky or anything to do with gambling casinos, much less assassinations," Roosevelt said.

"This places a cloud over my name. I am damaged beyond repair."

OIL BLACKMAIL 'GOOD FOR U.S.'

SEATTLE (AP)—Arab use of oil resources for "political blackmail" through a complete export ban could be "the best thing that could happen" to the United States, an economic consultant said Thursday.

Bruce O. Netschert, vice-president of National Economic Research Associates of Washington, D.C., said a total Middle East oil export embargo would create "immediate public resolve" to develop advanced energy technology.

"It would be billions for research, but not a dollar's worth of loss of freedom in determining our own foreign policy," Netschert said in remarks prepared for a National Association of Regulatory Utilities Commissioners' convention.

"They may have us over a barrel, so to speak, in what we pay for their oil, but that's as far as it goes. I believe that any Arab attempt to force our hand would coalesce public opinion against the position they would like us to take."

Netschert asserted that "the total world energy resource picture remains one of plenty." He said shortages occur because "the existing pattern of resources availability does not match the pattern of energy consumption."

While the world cannot hope to rely on petroleum resources indefinitely, he said, oil and gas reserves are "unquestionably adequate for a long enough period—several decades at least—to give us time to develop the necessary technology and make the necessary shift in the pattern of our energy input mix."

In an analysis of six energy resources forms, he said the Soviet Union possesses 42 per cent of all available reserves. The middle east and Africa, he said, hold 1 per cent, and the United States has "a comfortable 19 per cent."

Hanging Unlikely —Allmand

WINNIPEG (CP)—Solicitor-General Warren Allmand says the federal government likely will commute the sentence of anyone charged with capital murder if a bill extending the ban on capital punishment passes the House of Commons.

Allmand told a news conference here Tuesday that although persons charged now with capital murder might be sentenced to death if convicted, the government likely would commute their sentences "to make the law equal."

Under proposed amendment now before Parliament the death penalty would apply only to persons who kill a peace officer.

MDs Want to Hear Complaints

VANCOUVER (CP)—Patients believing they have received incompetent treatment from doctors should notify the British Columbia College of Physicians and Surgeons, representatives of the B.C. Hospitals Association were told Wednesday.

Dr. J. A. Hutchison, deputy registrar of the college, told a Vancouver seminar on laws relating to doctors and hospitals that such allegations will be investigated by a special complaints committee.

A member of the audience, asking what the medical profession does to protect the public, spoke of a case in which a doctor diagnosed an illness in a young boy as muscular dystrophy, stated that the child would not live until five and that no treatment would help. It was later discovered the boy did not have muscular dystrophy.

Dr. Hutchison said such complaints, if substantiated by the complaints committee, would result in suspension of the doctor.

He said the performance of doctors is continually being assessed but it would be ludicrous to think that incompetence does not occur.

"I think the medical profession is making moves towards the concept of periodic re-examination of doctors after they have been in practice several years," he said.

Boyd Ferris, legal counsel for the B.C. Hospitals Association said the medical profession appears to be alarmed that taking in responsibilities may bring on substantially more in the way of legal obligations that would have been the case 20 years ago.

He said this was probably the result of several successful malpractice suits in the U.S., in which astronomical damages have been awarded. However, he added, there is nothing to suggest that the "sue the doctor" syndrome has been anywhere near as bad in Canada.

He said doctors and hospitals enjoy reasonable protection under Canadian law.

Dr. Gerald Bonham, medical health officer for Vancouver, said existing laws are confused in many instances. For example, he said, a single doctor in an outlying area can commit an apparently mentally ill person to hospital for examination for a 72-hour period but in urban areas it takes two doctors to certify a person as being mentally ill.

Dr. Bonham suggested that one doctor in an urban area should also be able to commit a person to hospital for 72 hours for examination if the patient is considered a danger to himself or others.

The law relating to alcoholics is also confusing, he said.

Persons found drunk in a public place may be committed for treatment if they appear in court within 72 hours but that this is not possible if a person is found drunk on a Friday afternoon because the time period would have elapsed over the weekend. He suggested the law is also incongruous in that a person could be drinking himself into oblivion in his home and not get medical help.

The law has not yet caught up with regard to the treatment of persons ill as a result of drug abuse, he added.

Dr. Bonham said laws authorizing the detention of persons with communicable diseases refusing treatment work pretty well with regard to illnesses such as venereal disease but break down in connection with other ailments such as tuberculosis.

He said that existing hospitals do not have the facilities to detain persons with tuberculosis, about one-third of whom are alcoholics, and advocated that some detention facilities should be provided to prevent spread of the disease.

Russian Boats Don't Worry U.S. Fisheries

PORT ANGELES, Wash. (AP)—A United States government authority on fisheries emerged from a four-hour meeting with a Soviet delegation Wednesday and said he's not worried about what the Russians are catching, but he isn't so sure about the East Germans and the Poles.

The two dozen Russian trawlers off the Oregon and Washington coasts are only going after hake, John Glude, deputy regional director of the national Marine Fisheries Service, said.

"We know pretty well what they're catching," Glude said. Salmon "wasn't an issue," he said.

"The best indication that we've had is that they're telling us the truth" about not catching salmon.

"But that doesn't mean we're going to stop watching them."

Glude noted that in recent weeks an East German and a Polish trawler were spotted off the Oregon coast. He said U.S. authorities are not sure what they might be catching in addition to hake.

"We're not sure that this is the only species they catch," he said.

Glude said the Americans in Wednesday's meeting at the coast guard air station here asked the Soviet delegation what else, if anything, the East Germans and Poles are catching.

But, Glude said, the Soviets maintained that the East German and Polish ships are totally independent of the Russian fleet and that the Russians have had no contact with them except briefly once to supply some fuel.

Also discussed at the meeting of U.S. and Soviet officials, were problems of identifying fishing gear from each nation and rescues at sea.

Alarm Ignored, Before Jet Crash

PEABODY, Mass. (AP)—A faulty alarm, misunderstanding conversations and a short staff plagued air traffic operations the day a Delta jetliner crashed at Boston and killed 88 persons, air controllers testified Wednesday.

Testimony about the foggy July 31 crash came from three Logan International Airport controllers during a hearing by the National Transportation Safety Board.

They testified that because a control tower alarm frequently malfunctioned, operators ignored it even though it was triggered when the DC-9 slammed into a seawall and shattered runway guidance lights.

fore the tower knew the plane had crashed.

The approach controller, Charles Taylor, testified he delayed turning over the Delta plane to the local controller because he was preoccupied with two other aircraft that were mistakenly flying at the same altitude.

An approach controller usually guides incoming aircraft until they are about two minutes from landing. He then turns the airplane over to a local controller, who brings them to the ground.

Because of the delay, the ill-fated Delta pilot did not get weather information until 20 seconds before impact—nine seconds before he had to make a decision on whether to go through with the landing.

$5M IN POT SEIZED AFTER SEA CHASE

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—More than eight tons of marijuana with an estimated street value of $5 million was seized by the coast guard Wednesday after a chase on high seas that ended in the Bahamas, authorities said.

The coast guard said a 43-foot fishing boat, Gilma I, had surrendered near Anguilla Cay, Bahamas. Two Miami men, Nelson Paz and Dagoberto Norquez, were arrested on board.

Coast guard cutters pursued the Miami-based boat into Bahamian territorial waters Tuesday after the crew resisted attempts to board the boat for inspection. With Bahamian government co-operation, a coast guard cutter took the boat in tow.

'Lots of Energy in World' Says Solar Researcher

WINNIPEG (CP)—An American solar energy research engineer says North America is not facing an energy crisis, but will if it does not effectively manage its traditional energy resources and develop alternative sources.

"There is lots of energy in the world to use," Jeff Hammer of Minneapolis, Minn., said Wednesday, "and we must determine the best means of managing the energies we now have in order to maintain the necessary supply."

Hammer told the third annual meeting of the Biomass Energy Institute here that better means of managing existing energy supplies will mean an alteration in the standard of living in North America.

Hammer, who works at the Honeywell Systems and Research Centre, is involved in research on direct solar energy use. He said solar energy—or sunlight—can be used to provide electricity, heating and water purification.

Slayer Claims Insurance

CALGARY (CP)—Keith Latta, convicted of murdering Robert Neville, has filed a statement of claim to collect a life insurance policy on the slain man.

Latta, a former business associate of the murdered Edmonton travel agent, is serving a life sentence at William Head prison.

The statement of claim, filed in Alberta Supreme Court, names London Life Insurance Co. and company agent Harry Kingstone of Kingston, Ont., as defendants.

A life insurance policy for $37,500, which was raised to $75,000 in the double indemnity provision, was taken on Neville Aug. 28, 1967.

Use Oil as Lever, Arab Nations Urged

LONDON (UPI)—A former secretary general of the Organization for Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) said Wednesday Arabs should use their immense oil resources to force a settlement of the Israeli-Arab conflict.

"The Arabs now hold the keys to the energy and monetary crisis. They will know how to use both as a political weapon to enforce a just settlement in the Middle East on the U.S. administration that still believes might is right," said Dr. Nadim Pachachi.

He said Arab oil producing countries should close their ranks to freeze crude oil production at present levels until Israel withdraws from all Arab territories occupied during the Middle East war in 1967.

"Economically such a move would be perfectly feasible since present production levels are sufficient to meet the financial needs of most Arab producing countries, particularly in the current situation of rising prices," Pachachi said.

More Profits Sought For City Restaurant

An expanded role for McPherson Restaurant, with the aim of making it more profitable, was recommended today by city council parks and recreation committee.

The city terminated its lease with restaurant operator Taffy Richards Sept. 1.

Now the committee suggests the publicly-owned restaurant be rented out for a wide variety of functions, including wedding receptions, banquets and business seminars, although the city itself would not be responsible for catering.

It also supports a recommendation by recreation manager Jack Morgan that $5,000 be spent on redecorating and cleaning the restaurant, and purchasing new equipment.

The committee deferred consideration of a $13,000 bill for major refurbishing, including $4,000 for a new fire exit and $3,000 for partial re-carpeting.

Campfire Ban Lifted

All restrictions on campfires and industrial activities have been lifted on Vancouver Island as rain continues to dampen the woods.

For the first time since summer began there have been no new fires in British Columbia in the past 24 hours, a B.C. Forest Service spokesman said.

"Hopefully the fire season is ending."

There were 143 fires still burning in the interior and southeastern B.C. but none on Vancouver Island.

Restrictions were imposed Sept. 12 and 14 on travel and industrial activities during a brief hot spell but the two-day rainfall has greatly reduced the threat of fires.

Campfire restrictions have been lifted across B.C. except for the Penticton watershed.

Pipe Bill Validity Questioned

WASHINGTON (AP)—Interior Secretary Rogers Morton has warned that the congressional bill authorizing the trans-Alaska pipeline may be unconstitutional. He urged that it be changed in a house-senate conference committee.

In a letter sent to Senator Henry Jackson (Dem.-Wash.) Morton said last week that the bill's language "could raise an unintended question concerning separation of powers."

Morton singled out the assertion in different bills passed by the house and senate that congress finds the government has complied satisfactorily with the National Environmental Policy Act.

"The finding may be interpreted to be a determination more properly made by the judiciary," Morton said.

"If the right-of-way authorization is then construed the hinge on this congressional finding, the validity of the entire trans-Alaska pipeline authorization would be in jeopardy."

Five Colwood Break-Ins Yield $5

Five dollars in coins appears to be all that is missing after five buildings in the Colwood area were broken into Wednesday night.

Colwood RCMP said today break-ins were reported at Dunsmuir Junior Secondary, 2341 Painter; Elizabeth Fisher Junior Secondary, 3067 Jacklin; Sooke School Board offices, 2227 Sooke; the Wagon Wheel restaurant, 2686 Sooke; and Langford Motors Ltd., 890 Goldstream.

Police said some windows were broken and cash drawers jimmied; otherwise damage was minimal. Only Langford Motors had so far reported a theft—five dollars worth of change from the cash register.

Charles Cunliffe Barnett, a Vancouver lawyer, will become the provincial court judge at Williams Lake on Oct. 1; Philip Reid Govan, a lawyer in White Rock, will become a judge in the South Fraser district on Oct. 8; and Kenneth David Page, a Vancouver lawyer, will become provincial court judge for the North Fraser district on Oct. 9.

Spacemen Check Ship

HOUSTON (AP) — Commander Alan Bean planned an extensive check today of the slightly disabled Apollo spaceship which is to ferry the Skylab 2 astronauts back to earth Tuesday.

The commander planned several hours in the cabin of the Apollo craft, linked to one end of the space station since the astronauts arrived July 28, its systems shut down.

Bean, Owen Garriott and Jack Lousma also scheduled time for reviewing new procedures for undocking the Apollo and guiding it back to earth with two of its four main steering engines out of commission.

Bean will double check the two good jets, which sensors indicate are in excellent shape.

And he'll power up the craft's electrical, guidance, navigation and computer systems.

Two of the steering jets developed leaks early in the mission and would be used only in an emergency. The astronauts will use untried flight techniques to fly the Apollo home with two engines.

Even if the two good jets in the main system fail, the spacemen have alternative engine systems that could orbit the Apollo and return it safely to earth.

Bean, Garriott and Lousma are to kick free from the Skylab station Tuesday and head for a splashdown at 6:20 p.m. EDT in the Pacific Ocean 290 miles southwest of San Diego, Calif. It will end man's longest space voyage — 59 days, 11 hours, 9 minutes.

NDP Chief Seeks Seat

NANAIMO — Frank Murphy of Nanaimo, provincial president of the New Democratic Party, will seek a seat as a director on the Nanaimo Regional Board in the November civic elections. Murphy is principal of the Island Youth Centre.

GRANDSON'S GUNPOINT PLOT ON SELASSIE FAILS

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The Eritrean Liberation Front said Wednesday that Haile Selassie's grandson held the Ethiopian emperor at gunpoint aboard a jetliner last week and tried to force him to abdicate. Osman Sabbi, secretary-general of the organization that seeks independence for Eritrea, a former Italian colony now part of Ethiopia, said the attempt was made by Prince Iskandar Desta during the emperor's trip home Friday from a three-day visit to West Germany.

Desta, 40, is deputy commander of the Ethiopian navy.

During the flight, the pilot of the Boeing 707 issued a hijack signal while over Italy. He also radioed Cairo control tower that the aircraft had been hijacked with a "very important person aboard."

Italian officials quoted the pilot as telling the control tower at Rome's Fiumicino Airport there was a man in the cabin holding a gun at his head.

The pilot later radioed that "everything was under control on board" and that he had mistakenly pressed the hijack alarm. No explanation was given for the reported radio messages.

The plane landed safely at Addis Ababa and reports said the emperor left the plane for the normal welcome home.

Time Lost Due to Strikes Less Than Half 1972 Tally

OTTAWA (CP) — Time lost due to strikes in the first half of 1973 are less than half the total for the same period in 1972, in spite of a recent general trend toward longer and larger walkouts and lockouts.

Labor department figures show more than 1.9 million man-days were lost due to work stoppages during the first six months of this year. The figures do not include strikes by railway workers, which began late in July.

In the first half of 1972, 4.7 million man-days were lost. Last year set a record for the annual total of time lost due to strikes with a final tally of more than eight million days.

Much of the 1972 total time was lost as 200,000 Quebec public servants left their jobs in spring strikes and workers in the British Columbia construction and lumber industries were involved in contract disputes.

STRIKES GETTING BIGGER Previous record was set in 1969 when strikes by Toronto construction workers, Sudbury miners and steelworkers pushed the total to 7.7 million man-days lost.

Despite the sizeable drop in the amount of time lost from January to June this year, recently released figures from the labor department show that over the years from 1960 to 1971, strikes and lockouts were getting bigger.

The booklet Strikes and Lockouts in 1971, which provides the latest statistics, shows that work stoppages involving 100 or more workers jumped to 54.1 per cent of the total in 1971 from 33.2 per cent in 1960.

Work stoppages lasting 25 days or more increased to 28.7 per cent in 1971 from 19.3 per cent of the total of strikes in 1960.

By 1971, 50.2 per cent of all strikes and lockouts caused 1,000 or more man-days loss, compared with 27.4 in 1960.

These figures represent general trends only and do not reveal some year-to-year decreases. For example, 1971 had lower or equal figures in all three of the above sets of statistics than 1969 and 1970.

TREND GENERAL But 1971, with only 2.8 million man-days lost due to strikes and lockouts seems to have been an exceptional year in the last seven — all of which have time-lost totals of about four million or more.

The increased strike activity is not only evident in Canada. Britain has experienced a quadrupling of time lost due to work stoppages in the last four years.

Factors accounting for the rise in number and duration of strikes could be the larger number of workers organized into unions or given the right to strike, larger size of bargaining units and cost-of-living pressures that are making negotiators take tougher positions in contract talks.

During the first half of 1973, there were 338 work stoppages involving 95,477 workers. Wildcat strikes by postal workers, a long walk-out by elevator constructors and rotating strikes by Air Canada machinists boosted the total of time lost.

In the first six months of 1972, there were 343 work stoppages with 619,911 workers involved.

Car Workers Vote on Pact

DETROIT (AP) — Voting on a new contract covering Chrysler employees began today as the United Auto Workers union urged members to be back on the job Monday.

Approval of the three-year contract by the UAW's 127,500 Chrysler members was expected because union members have never turned down a contract recommended by their leaders.

$1 Billion Quebec Welfare Boost

QUEBEC (CP) — A $1.1-billion income security plan involving large increases for Quebecers on welfare and families with children under 18 was announced Wednesday by Premier Robert Bourassa.

Bourassa said two-thirds of the extra money will come from Ottawa. Cost of the new family allowance program will be $599 million, while the new welfare program will cost $112 million.

The new program, which goes into effect Jan. 1, 1974, was made possible by an agreement between the Quebec and Ottawa governments to overhaul and integrate the existing twin social security systems operating in the province.

It seeks to re-establish a "balance between social welfare payments and the minimum wage" through integration of family allowance and welfare programs, Bourassa told a news conference.

Under the new family allowance scheme a family will receive $15 a month for the first child, $22 for the second, $33 for the third and $37 for each additional child under 12 plus $5 extra for each child between the ages of 12 and 17.

The current federal-provincial joint program pays families in Quebec an average of $10 a child.

A couple on welfare will receive $272 a month starting in 1974, compared with the current $206 monthly payment. A welfare family with six children will see their monthly payment increase to $509 from $434 when the program takes effect.

The premier said acceptance of the new program by Quebec effectively buries other demands made by Claude Castonguay, social affairs minister, for complete legislative priority in the social affairs field.

"In concrete terms, we have priority. We decide how much large families will receive, how much the poor will receive and the middle classes."

A new element in the plan is that family allowances will not be taxable by Quebec, whether the payments come from the federal or provincial governments.

Because of provisions of the new federal law on family allowance payments, Castonguay explained.

It will tax Quebecers on their income from federal family allowance payments.

The provincial family allowance, paid twice a year up to now, will be paid monthly under the new system.

Castonguay said that because welfare and family allowance payments together come to less than the total of minimum wage and family allowances, the new system provides an incentive to work.

Junta Hold Based On Repression

By RICHARD GOTT

SANTIAGO — The situation in Chile appears to be far more serious than the communiques of the military junta have allowed the world to believe.

There is little evidence that the junta does not physically control the country, but it is clear that this control is being maintained with a degree of repression uncommon in Latin America.

(Soldiers armed with automatic weapons patrolling the streets of downtown Santiago early today encountered sporadic fire from snipers resisting the nine-day-old ruling military junta.

(Shots echoed through the streets despite a warning Wednesday night by Air Force Gen. Gustavo Legih, a member of the four-man junta, that "any man who fires against our forces, dies, any man who shoots innocent persons, dies.")

For the first time since the coup eight days ago which overthrew the government of President Salvador Allende, the frontiers of the country were opened Wednesday to admit a charter plenitude of more than 300 journalists from all over the world who had been waiting in Buenos Aires.

In the first few hours after our arrival, I was able to talk to witnesses who had seen things which left them still quivering with rage, anger and shock. Shock is perhaps the best word to describe the state of mind of supporters and sympathizers of the deposed Popular Unity government.

It seems that few people were prepared for the ferocity of the counter-revolution.

In Santiago, things have been bad enough an apparent massacre at the Technical University, bodies in the Mapocho River, the destruction of the Sumar Textile factory—but reports coming in from outlying districts in the south suggest that there the repression may be worse.

One foreign girl who teaches in the southern town of Temuco got off the bus Wednesday in Santiago with a hair-raising story. Hundreds of people have been arrested, she said, accused of nothing more than co-operation with the Allende government. Lists of local people wanted by the army are read over the radio, and edict No. 30 of the "Tern"

U.S. FUNDS FOR CHILE

SANTIAGO — Assistance to the junta is close at hand. Wednesday morning's headline in the right-wing daily El Mercurio announced that Chile was to receive a new credit of $65 million from the InterAmerican Development Bank. The president of the bank, which is dominated by the United States, said that "political changes in a country do not alter our long-term intentions."

Inflation Blamed On Rich

DAR ES SALAAM, Tanzania (Reuter) — Finance Minister John Turner of Canada made a strong call today for international controls to limit the effect of the domestic economic policies of some rich countries on world inflation.

Turner urged the meeting of Commonwealth finance ministers here to adopt his proposal in the form of a resolution in advance of next week's meeting of the 126-nation International Monetary Fund (IMF) and the World Bank in Nairobi.

He said that in his speech to the Commonwealth meeting this morning he pinpointed two ways in which some rich countries were contributing to a world-inflationary situation.

Firstly, the monetary policies of some advanced countries— and officials said he clearly had in mind the United States, West Germany and Britain—in setting high interest rates for domestic reasons, were having inflationary repercussions on other countries.

Secondly, the balance of payments situation of some surplus countries had led them to enter commodity markets so strongly that they were affecting commodity prices in an inflationary way.

GAS PRICE CURB NOT BINDING

OTTAWA (CP) — There is no practical way to monitor retail and independent price increases during the voluntary price freeze agreed to by oil companies, Energy Minister Donald MacDonald said Wednesday.

He told the Commons that no new legislation is planned, but the government is ready to act on any increases that violate existing laws.

Outside the House, he said "hundreds and perhaps thousands" of operators fall outside the limits of the freeze. But he said he hoped most would follow the example set by oil companies.

The freeze, to last until the end of January, was requested by Prime Minister Trudeau earlier this month as part of the federal effort to control inflation.

Earlier Wednesday, the Ontario Retail Gasoline Association said it will reject the government's proposed voluntary freeze.

Association manager George Coates said the general convention, meeting here, will vote to ignore the freeze because it is unfair to dealers.

He said oil companies increased their prices shortly before the Sept. 4 introduction of the freeze, while retail prices haven't risen.

Westcoast Cut Row

Times News Services

R. B. Stokes, executive vice-president of Inland Natural Gas Co. Ltd., said Wednesday in Prince George his company will dispute Westcoast Transmission Ltd.'s method of distributing natural gas to its customers during an expected gas shortage this winter.

Stokes said British Columbia consumers should not suffer a shortage of a Canadian resource to the same extent as American consumers.

Westcoast has announced it will spread a shortage of its gas supply from northern British Columbia among its four customers by curtailing supplies by 9.5 per cent each.

Westcoast supplies 62 per cent of its daily 1.3 billion cubic feet gas flow to El Paso Natural Gas Co. in the United States. The balance is sold to Inland, B.C. Hydro and Pacific Northern Gas.

Robert Kadlec, president of Inland, said in Vancouver the company is calling a meeting of its industrial customers here Monday to discuss the situation.

He said Inland has 12 major industrial accounts, and a number of these could suffer curtailment on their firm gas contracts as well as on interruptible contracts.

Kadlec said these customers include seven pulp mills which have no standby fuel because they are in the B.C. Interior. Pulp mills on the tidewater can switch to oil delivered by tankers.

In Victoria, Resources Minister Bob Williams also expressed his opposition Wednesday to exporting energy, when he told reporters B.C. would not favor exporting additional electricity to Washington State to prevent the flooding of Skagit Valley.

Williams was speaking outside the house after telling the legislature B.C. would not appear before the U.S. Federal Power Commission next February.

The FPC is to hold hearings into an application by Seattle City-Light and Power Co. to raise the level of the Ross Dam in the U.S. by 125 feet. The move would provide more power for Seattle while flooding B.C.'s Skagit Valley.

The province has no intention of being an intervenor in the dispute.

Keystone Cops Chase

DUNCAN — With all the excitement of a Keystone Cops chase, a Duncan police cruiser sped through town Wednesday with a private car in pursuit.

RCMP said today the incident started when a man driving on Somers Road near Duncan hit a telephone pole and sheared it off near the bottom.

Police officers arrived at the scene of the accident, but while they were investigating, a man hopped into the police cruiser and took off down the road.

The officers commandeered a car belonging to a private citizen who was waiting for the telephone pole to be moved out of the way, and gave chase.

At 6:25 p.m., about 30 minutes after the accident, the officers found their car abandoned about a quarter of a mile from the accident scene.

A search was conducted of nearby woods with the help of a Nanaimo police tracking dog and, more than an hour later, a man was taken into custody.

Boy Reynolds, 27, address not known, is to appear in Duncan provincial court later today in connection with the incident.

Town On Block

SALMO (CP) — In one of the most unusual public auctions in the history of British Columbia, the entire mine, mill and townsite of Canex Placer Ltd.'s tungsten division near this community in the southeastern section of the province will be disposed of on Sept. 28 and 29.

Ritchie Brothers, a Richmond auctioneering firm, has had representatives on the site for three months indexing and cataloguing the hundreds of items to be sold.

The items include a large number of vehicles such as loaders, dump trucks, rubber-tired mining machines, compressors, transformers, a complete machine shop, a lead-zinc concentrator, conveyors, pipelines and motors.

Eighteen frame residences will be auctioned as well as two large halls, a scale house, pump house and other buildings.

Replacement value of the property is estimated at about $10 million and it is expected the auction may raise as much as $1 million.

The tungsten mill began operations during the Second World War when the supply of the metal, important in the manufacturing of steel, was limited. It closed down Sept. 1 after being in constant operation since 1947, producing either tungsten or lead and zinc.

The lead-zinc ore ran out about two years ago and the tungsten deposits were worked out this year.

Salmo is about 260 air-miles east of Vancouver and some 15 miles northeast of the huge Cominco lead-zinc refinery at Trail.

White House Ends Silence, But . . .

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — The White House broke its puzzling silence on Vice President Agnew's status Wednesday with a cautious statement of support and denial of any White House effort to remove him from office.

But even as these statements were being issued there was a fresh report that a principal White House official has predicted Agnew's resignation in the next few weeks. The report came from an eastern Republican who said he was told by the official within the past few days that Agnew's departure would give the president an opportunity to set a whole new tone for the administration.

These developments came amid a barrage of reports that great tensions are building up between Agnew and the White House staff. They are based on the belief among Agnew associates that a concerted effort is under way within the administration to build up pressure for Agnew's resignation.

Meanwhile a group of house Democrats, led by Rep. John Conyers of Michigan, met Wednesday to discuss the Agnew situation but refused to reveal the substance of the closed door talks. Earlier this year, the same group explored the possibility of impeachment proceedings against President Nixon.

Another Democrat, Senate Leader Mike Mansfield said today that Agnew must be considered "innocent until proven guilty" and should be given "the benefit of the doubt."

Native Nuptials Nab Girl, 7

SYDNEY (UPI) — The Australian government said today a seven-year-old aboriginal girl, who has lived most of her life in a comfortable white foster home, has been sent back to her ancestral tribe against her will to marry a middle-aged man.

A cabinet minister told Parliament authorities took Nola Brown from her middle class home in a Darwin suburb because of a marriage contract made at her birth by her paternal father and her husband-to-be.

"We told them we considered this to be too short a time to allow Nola to get used to the idea," Athold Brown, her white foster father, said.

"She screamed and cried and said she wanted to stay with us."

Aboriginal Affairs Minister Gordon Bryant told Parliament Nola would have to spend the rest of her life living in a rustic shack on the banks of a river in Australia's hinterlands.

Nola had lived with Brown and his wife in a suburb of Darwin since a few months after being born prematurely in a welfare settlement and placed in a hospital.

Bryant told the legislators the natural father of the girl, apparently concerned about her health, allowed Nola to live in a foster home after birth under the condition she be sent back at his request to be married within her tribe.

The girl lived happily with the Browns' six other children in the comfortable home and neighbors said she began primary school this year.

Bryant said she was taken from the home Sept. 12 by an officer of the department of aboriginal affairs and now lives in a shack called "Bark Humpy" on the banks of the Cadell River, 500 miles north-east of Darwin.

"I understand in this particular tribal situation the promising has taken place in the past and that at some time in the future, say at 10 or 12, the actual promise will or is likely to be consummated," he said.

Bryant said the government has no legal power to intervene. "We can only hope that the child is happily placed with her natural parents," Bryant said.

$9,325 PER PRISONER

OTTAWA (CP) — The annual cost of keeping one person in prison has risen by almost $6,000 in the last 10 years, says a report presented to the Commons Wednesday.

The average cost of keeping a person in penitentiary during the 1971-72 fiscal year was $9,325 compared with $3,380 in 1962-63, said the report, prepared by the solicitor-general's department.

The increased cost is due primarily to greater emphasis on rehabilitation programs, said Roger Tasse, deputy solicitor-general.

The programs, the additional staff and equipment required to put them into effect, and inflation boosted the figures, Tasse said in an interview.

Total penitentiary costs were almost $80 million in 1971-72, compared with $23.9 million in 1962-63. Prison populations increased by about four per cent annually during this period. The increase this year is 13 per cent, said Tasse.

$9,325 PER PRISONER

OTTAWA (CP) — The annual cost of keeping one person in prison has risen by almost $6,000 in the last 10 years, says a report presented to the Commons Wednesday.

The average cost of keeping a person in a penitentiary during the 1971-72 fiscal year was $9,325 compared with $3,380 in 1962-63, said the report, prepared by the solicitor-general's department.

The increased cost is due primarily to greater emphasis on rehabilitation programs, said Roger Tasse, deputy solicitor-general.

The programs, the additional staff and equipment required to put them into effect, and inflation boosted the figures, Tasse said in an interview.

Total penitentiary costs were almost $80 million in 1971-72, compared with $23.9 million in 1962-63. Prison populations increased by about four per cent annually during this period. The increase this year is 13 per cent, said Tasse.

Native Nuptials Nab Girl, 7

SYDNEY (UPI) — The Australian government said today a seven-year-old aboriginal girl who has lived most of her life in a comfortable white foster home, has been sent back to her ancestral tribe against her will to marry a middle-aged man.

A cabinet minister told Parliament authorities took Nola Brown from her middle class home in a Darwin suburb because of a marriage contract made at her birth by her natural father and her husband-to-be.

"We told them we considered this to be too short a time to allow Nola to get used to the idea," Arnold Brown, her white foster father, said. "She screamed and cried and said she wanted to stay with us."

Aboriginal Affairs Minister Gordon Bryant told Parliament Nola would have to spend the rest of her life living in a rustic shack on the banks of a river in Australia's hinterlands.

Nola had lived with Brown and his wife in a suburb of Darwin since a few months after being born prematurely in a welfare settlement and placed in a hospital.

Bryant told the legislators the natural father of the girl, apparently concerned about her health, allowed Nola to live in a foster home after birth under the condition she be sent back at his request to be married within her tribe.

The girl lived happily with the Browns' six other children in the comfortable home and neighbors said she began primary school this year.

Bryant said she was taken from the Home Sept. 12 by an officer of the department of aboriginal affairs and now lives in a shack called "Bark Hut" on the banks of the Cadeil River, 500 miles north-east of Darwin.

"I understand in this particular tribal situation the promising has taken place in the past and that at some time in the future, say at 10 or 12, the actual promise will or is likely to be consummated," he said.

Bryant said the government has no legal power to intervene. "We can only hope that the child is happily placed with her natural parents," Bryant said.

Doctor Urges More Outlets For Senior Sex

TORONTO (CP) — A doctor said this week there should be more provisions for sexual activity in homes for the aged.

"Perhaps one possible solution would even be to have petting rooms in much the same way as some high schools now have smoking rooms," Dr. Marion Powell said. "I suspect you would have a very long waiting list."

Powell, associate professor at University of Toronto's school of hygiene, told a convention of the Ontario Association of Homes for the Aged that repressed sexuality is one of the major problems of old age.

The design of senior citizen's buildings which emphasize shared accommodation is one of the factors that deprive elderly people of the sexual activity they still need and want," she told the 200 delegates.

"We cringe at the thought of masturbation, pornography or sexual promiscuity among the elderly," she said. "Sex among the elderly is seen almost with repulsion."

And yet studies have indicated that pleasurable responses to sex can last well into a person's 70th or 80th year, she added.

However, one delegate disagreed that homes for the aged are devoid of sexual activity.

"My problem," said the Northern Ontario delegate, "is the 70-year-old prostitute who refuses to retire."

Try Baked Alaska—Beans

By MARY MOORE

You do not need me to tell you that you can save house-keeping money by spending more time in the kitchen.

Hordes of our readers have started making their own bread. Our correspondents tell us they have stopped buying packaged convenience foods. The number of requests for formulas or recipes for making prepared mixes is increasing daily.

As you know I have resolved to help you feed your families as economically and nutritionally as possible.

When I priced dried beans I found them ranging from 20¢ to 45¢ per pound. Beans are a good protein vegetable and our budgeting-nutrition-conscious readers should serve them often. The recipe I am giving you today calls for dried white beans for which I paid 25¢ per pound. This was a prize-winner at a Fall Fair in 1970.

ALASKA BAKED BEANS

1½ cups dry white beans
3 cups cold water
2½ tsp. soy sauce (first amount)
4 slices chopped side bacon
¼ cup chopped onion (or bottled flakes)
¼ tsp. garlic salt
1 undiluted can cream of tomato soup
1 14-ounce can pineapple chunks including syrup
2 tbsp. light brown sugar
2 tbsp. molasses

1 tbsp. soy sauce (second amount)

In a large pot in which they can be cooked later soak the beans overnight in the cold water and two and one-half teaspoons soy sauce (first amount)

If to be served at 6 p.m. at 2 p.m. put beans on to cook in the liquid on them. (I had 1 cup surplus liquid which was sufficient. You need one cup liquid.) Cook about three-quarters of an hour. Now add all remaining ingredients and mix well. Turn into bean pot or casserole with tight-fitting lid and bake at 325 deg. Fahr. for three hours, stirring twice during the baking period. Do not overbake these beans. They should be slightly sloppy.

Ten Commandments

DEAR READERS: Once, in all humility and with no intended irreverence to Moses, I published my "Ten Commandments For Wives." Here is the companion piece, "Ten Commandments For Husbands."

1. Thou shalt put thy wife before thy mother, thy father, thy daughter, and thy son, for she is thy life-long companion.
2. Abuse not thy body either with excessive food, tobacco, or drink, that thy days may be many and healthful in the presence of thy loved ones.

3. Permit neither thy business, nor thy hobby to make of thee a stranger to thy children, for the most precious gift a man giveth his family is his time.

4. Forget not the virtue of cleanliness.

5. Make not thy wife a beggar, but share willingly with her thy worldly goods.

6. Forget not to say, "I love you." For even tho thy love be constant, thy wife doth yearn to hear the words.

7. Remember that the approval of thy wife is worth more than the admiring glances of a hundred strangers. Cleave unto her, and forsake all others.

8. Keep thy home in good repair, for out of it cometh the joys of thy old age.

9. Forgive with grace. For who among us does not need to be forgiven?

10. Honor the Lord thy God all the days of thy life, and thy children will rise up and call thee blessed.

DEAR ABBY: I recently graduated from high school and thought this problem would be over, but I was wrong.

You see, my mother was never married, and she has never discussed the reason with me. In school when we had to fill out forms, where it had, "Father's name" I always made one up because I was too ashamed to leave it blank.

Now I have the same problem again when I apply for a job.

There are other places where father's name is asked, too: hospital admissions, and insurance forms, to name a few.

What do I say when someone hands a form back to me and says, "you forgot to fill in your father's name?" Thank you kindly. — Fatherless Girl.

DEAR GIRL: It's nobody's business. I checked with the Census Bureau. They referred me to the Human Rights Office, whose spokesman said, "Just tell her to leave the space blank."

If someone hands it back to you, saying, "You forgot," look them right in the eye, and say, "No, I didn't" and hand it right back.

CONFIDENTIAL TO M. N.: No, I am not encouraging permissiveness, but what has been done is done, so why carry a grudge for a lifetime? The past is but a bucket of ashes.

Sewage Compost Studied

BELTSVILLE, Md. (UPI) — A promising method of turning large quantities of urban sewage into compost for use on soils offers hope of easing waste disposal problems in many areas, officials said today.

"It now looks as if composting comes closer to being technically efficient, economically sound, environmentally safe, agriculturally beneficial and politically feasible than any of the alternative methods for disposing of sewage sludge," said Agriculture Secretary Earl Buttz.

Buttz, in a speech prepared for delivery at a demonstration of a sludge-to-compost system here, said the U.S. population is now so great that natural processes are not enough to cope with waste materials.

"So we must help nature through technology. I am confident that technology can solve many, if not all, of our current environmental problems."

The demonstration project, launched on March 30, is being carried out jointly by the Maryland Environmental Service and the agriculture department's agricultural research service (ARS) at the ARS research station.

Sludge is trucked daily from the Blue Plains Sewage Plant, which serves much of the National Capital Area, and is mixed with wood chips. A composting machine, developed by inventor Herbert Cohey and the Terex division of General Motors, mixes the material daily for several weeks, allowing the sewage to break down without producing offensive odor, and then it is cured for about a month.

After that, the recycled sewage is ready to use as a soil conditioning compost or a low-grade fertilizer. As fertilizer, it was about one-fifth to one-tenth as potent as ordinary 5-10-5 plant food.

Scientists said the demonstration shows that the cost of composting the full 550 tons of sewage sludge produced daily by the Blue Plains plant would be less than the cost of incinerating the material. The composting also eliminated the need for dumping the sludge in waterways or using it in landfills.

Future Archeologists Will Really Dig Us

Every time I run across an article relating how archeologists are excavating and interpreting a new dig, I can't help but wonder what would happen should our civilization be abruptly extinguished.

If, like those individuals in Pompeii, we were all to perish suddenly, what presumptions about 1973 society would the archeologists of 3057 AD make, based on the contents of our basement?

What would they make of the two dozen empty boxes of various sizes and shapes which I have insisted upon transporting from one house to another over the past six years? This compulsion has been difficult enough to explain to my husband and the moving men; archeologists would undoubtedly jump to the conclusion that we were a race of box worshippers.

And what possible explanation would cover three blonde wigs on white wig stands, other than the obvious inference that art of our empty paper box religion demanded the ritual decapitation of albino virgins?

The box full of the children's Halloween costumes and masks would naturally enough be assumed to contain sacred garments used in these pagan rituals, especially in view of the fact that our daughter, who suffered a spectacular nosebleed after being hit with a taffy apple last year, left indelible stains all over Little Bo-Peep.

Upon discovering my long white wedding gown, they would assume that they had stumbled on the sacrificial garment itself, probably noting in passing that our culture obviously possessed an inexplicable admiration for short, fat virgins.

As confusing as it would be for anyone to excavate our basement, think of the furor should they inadvertently choose Disneyland as the site of their archeological dig. Undoubtedly they would report that the citizens of 1973 AD were a race of giant three-fingered mice.

FREE FOR THE ASKING

By HARRIET HART

If you don't know what n a m m i e s, coffin nails, smacks, Mary Janes or copilots are, you are not "with it." All are slang names of some frequently abused drugs.

The 10-page folder "Drug Reference Chart" answers many of the questions people ask about the non-medical use of drugs. It tells you, for instance, that the psychological effects of drug abuse depends on various factors, such as the physical size of the taker, method of administration (taken orally, by injection, etc.) and if the drug is taken in combination with other drugs.

The chart lists the various drug groups, including hallucinogens, depressants, and tranquillizers, and gives examples of each. It also indicates their various slang names and their pharmacological and legal classifications. It then reviews the medical uses of these drugs and what physical symptoms and behaviour patterns they produce if abused.

Finally, it lists major health hazards. For instance, glue sniffing can result in moderate psychological dependence and impaired judgment. Furthermore, it can induce aggressive behaviour and other antisocial acts. Even worse, it can lead to permanent damage to the brain, liver and kidneys. An overdose can result in accidental death.

$1 Billion Quebec Welfare Plan

QUEBEC (CP) — A $1.1-billion income-security plan involving large increases for Quebecers on welfare and families with children under 18 was announced Wednesday by Premier Robert Bourassa.

Bourassa said two-thirds of the extra money will come from Ottawa. Cost of the new family allowance program will be $399 million, while the new welfare program will cost $412 million.

The new program, which goes into effect Jan. 1, 1974, was made possible by an agreement between the Quebec and Ottawa governments to overhaul and integrate the existing twin social security systems operating in the province.

It seeks to re-establish a "balance between social welfare payments and the minimum wage" through integration of family allowance and welfare programs, Bourassa told a news conference.

Under the new family allowance scheme a family will receive $15 a month for the first child, $22 for the second, $33 for the third and $37 for each additional child under 12 plus $5 extra for each child between the ages of 12 and 17.

The current federal-provincial joint program pays families in Quebec an average of $10 a child.

A couple on welfare will receive $272 a month starting in 1974, compared with the current $206 monthly payment. A welfare family with six children under the age of 12 will get a basic monthly payment of $613 plus $181 for the children for a total of $434. Under present regulations, they get $434.

The premier said acceptance of the new program by Quebec effectively buries other demands made by Claude Castonguay, social affairs minister, for complete legislative priority in the social affairs field.

"In concrete terms, we have priority. We decide how much large families will receive, how much the poor will receive and the middle classes."

A new element in the plan is that family allowances will not be taxable by Quebec, whether the payments come from the federal or provincial governments.

Because of provisions of the new federal law on family allowance payments, Castonguay explained.

It will tax Quebecers on their income from federal family allowance payments.

The provincial family allowance, paid twice a year up to now, will be paid monthly under the new system.

Castonguay said that because welfare and family allowance payments together come to less than the total of minimum wage and family allowances, the new system provides an incentive to work.

Junta Hold Based On Repression

By RICHARD GOTT
Manchester Guardian

SANTIAGO — The situation in Chile appears to be far more serious than the communiques of the military junta have allowed the world to believe.

There is little evidence that the junta does not physically control the country, but it is clear that this control is being maintained with a degree of repression uncommon in Latin America.

(Soldiers armed with automatic weapons patrolling the streets of downtown Santiago early today encountered sporadic fire from snipers resisting the nine-day-old ruling military junta.)

(Shots echoed through the streets despite a warning Wednesday night by Air Force Gen. Gustavo Legih, a member of the four-man junta, that "any man who fires against our forces, dies, any man who shoots innocent persons, dies.")

For the first time since the coup eight days ago which overthrew the government of President Salvador Allende, the frontiers of the country were opened Wednesday to admit a charter plane load of more than 100 journalists from all over the world who had been waiting in Buenos Aires.

In the first few hours after our arrival, I was able to talk to witnesses who had seen things which left them still quivering with rage, anger and shock. Shock is perhaps the best word to describe the state of mind of supporters and sympathizers of the deposed Popular Unity government.

It seems that few people were prepared for the ferocity of the counter-revolution.

In Santiago, things have been bad enough—an apparent massacre at the Technical University, bodies in the Mapocho River, the destruction of the Sumar Textile factory, but reports coming in from outlying districts in the south suggest that there the repression may be worse.

One foreign girl, who teaches in the southern town of Temuco got off the bus Wednesday in Santiago with a hair-raising story. Hundreds of people have been arrested, she said, accused of nothing more than co-operation with the Allende government. Lists of local people wanted by the army are read over the radio, and edict No. 30 of the Te-

U.S. FUNDS FOR CHILE

SANTIAGO — Assistance to the junta is close at hand. Wednesday morning's headline in the right-wing daily El Mercurio announced that Chile was to receive a new credit of $65 million from the InterAmerican Development Bank. The president of the bank, which is dominated by the United States, said that "political changes in a country do not alter our long-term intentions."

Inflation Blamed On Rich

DAR ES SALAAM, Tanzania (Reuters) — Finance Minister John Turner of Canada made a strong call today for international controls to limit the effect of the domestic economic policies of some rich countries on world inflation.

Turner urged the meeting of Commonwealth finance ministers here to adopt his proposal in the form of a resolution in advance of next week's meeting of the 126-nation International Monetary Fund (IMF) and the World Bank in Nairobi.

He said that in his speech to the Commonwealth meeting this morning he pinpointed two ways in which some rich countries were contributing to a world inflationary situation.

Firstly, the monetary policies of some advanced countries—and officials said he clearly had in mind the United States, West Germany and Britain—in setting high interest rates for domestic reasons, were having inflationary repercussions on other countries.

Secondly, the balance of payments situation of some surplus countries had led them to enter commodity markets so strongly that they were affecting commodity prices in an inflationary way.

GAS PRICE CURB NOT BINDING

OTTAWA (CP) — There is no practical way to monitor retail and independent price increases during the voluntary price freeze agreed to by oil companies, Energy Minister Donald MacDonald said Wednesday.

He told the Commons that no new legislation is planned, but the government is ready to act on any increases that violate existing laws.

Outside the House, he said "hundreds and perhaps thousands" of operators fall outside the limits of the freeze. But he said he hoped most would follow the example set by oil companies.

The freeze, to last until the end of January, was requested by Prime Minister Trudeau earlier this month as part of the federal effort to control inflation.

Earlier Wednesday, the Ontario Retail Gasoline Association said it will reject the government's proposed voluntary freeze.

Association manager George Coates said the general convention, meeting here, will vote to ignore the freeze because it is unfair to dealers.

He said oil companies increased their prices shortly before the Sept. 4 introduction of the freeze, while retail prices haven't risen.

Westcoast Cut Fight

Times News Services

R. B. Stokes, executive vice-president of Inland Natural Gas Co. Ltd., said Wednesday in Prince George his company will dispute Westcoast Transmission Ltd.'s method of distributing natural gas to its customers during an expected gas shortage this winter.

Stokes said British Columbia consumers should not suffer a shortage of a Canadian resource to the same extent as American consumers.

Westcoast has announced it will spread a shortage of its gas supply from northern British Columbia among its four customers by curtailing supplies by 9.3 per cent each.

Westcoast supplies 62 per cent of its daily 1.3-billion cubic feet gas flow to El Paso Natural Gas Co. in the United States. The balance is sold to Inland, B.C. Hydro and Pacific Northern Gas.

Robert Kadlec, president of Inland, said in Vancouver the company is calling a meeting of its industrial customers here Monday to discuss the situation.

He said Inland has 12 major industrial accounts and a number of these could suffer curtailment on their firm gas contracts as well as on interruptible contracts.

Kadlec said these customers include seven pulp mills which have no standby fuel because they are in the B.C. Interior. Pulp mills on the tidewater can switch to oil delivered by tankers.

In Victoria, Resources Minister Bob Williams also expressed his opposition Wednesday to exporting energy when he told reporters B.C. would not favor exporting additional electricity to Washington State to prevent the flooding of Skagit Valley.

Williams was speaking outside the house after telling the legislature B.C. would not appear before the U.S. Federal Power Commission next February.

The U.S. is to hold hearings into an application by Seattle City Light and Power Co. to raise the level of the Ross Dam in the U.S. by 125 feet. The move would provide more power for Seattle while flooding B.C.'s Skagit Valley.

"The province has no intention of being an intervenor in the dispute," Williams said.

Town On Block

SALMO (CP) — In one of the most unusual public auctions in the history of British Columbia, the entire mine, mill and townsite of Canex Placer Ltd.'s tungsten division near this community in the southeastern section of the province will be disposed of on Sept. 28 and 29.

Ritchie Brothers, a Richmond auctioneering firm, has had representatives on the site for three months indexing and cataloguing the hundreds of items to be sold.

The items include a large number of vehicles such as loaders, dump trucks, rubber-tired mining machines, compressors, transformers, a complete machine shop, a lead-zinc concentrator, conveyors, pipelines and motors.

Eighteen frame residences will be auctioned as well as two large halls, a scale house, pump house and other buildings.

Replacement value of the property is estimated at about $10 million and it is expected the auction may raise as much as $1 million.

The tungsten mill began operations during the Second World War when the supply of the metal, important in the manufacturing of steel, was limited. It closed down Sept. 1 after being in constant operation since 1947, producing either tungsten or lead and zinc.

The lead-zinc ore ran out about two years ago and the tungsten deposits were worked out this year.

Salmo is about 260 air miles east of Vancouver and some 15 miles northeast of the huge Cominco lead-zinc refinery at Trail.

White House Ends Silence, But . . .

Times News Services
WASHINGTON — The White House broke its puzzling silence on Vice-President Agnew's status Wednesday with a cautious statement of support and denials of any White House effort to remove him from office.

But even as these statements were being issued there was a fresh report that a principal White House official has predicted Agnew's resignation in the next few weeks. The report came from an eastern Republican who said he was told by the official within the past few days that Agnew's departure would give the president an opportunity to set a whole new tone for the administration.

These developments came amid a barrage of reports that great tensions are building up between Agnew and the White House staff. They are based on the belief among Agnew associates that a concerted effort is under way within the administration to build up pressure for Agnew's resignation.

Meanwhile a group of house Democrats, led by Rep. John Conyers of Michigan, met Wednesday to discuss the Agnew situation but refused to reveal the substance of the closed door talks. Earlier this year, the same group explored the possibility of impeachment proceedings against President Nixon.

Another Democrat, Senate Leader Mike Mansfield said today that Agnew must be considered "innocent until proven guilty" and should be given "the benefit of the doubt."

Native Nuptials Nab Girl, 7

SYDNEY (UPI) — The Australian government said today a seven-year-old aboriginal girl, who has lived most of her life in a comfortable white foster home, has been sent back to her ancestral tribe against her will to marry a middle-aged man.

A cabinet minister told Parliament authorities took Nola Brown from her middle class home in a Darwin suburb because of a marriage contract made at her birth by her natural father and her husband-to-be.

"We told them we considered this to be too short a time to allow Nola to get used to the idea," Athold Brown, her white foster father, said.

"She screamed and cried and said she wanted to stay with us."

Aboriginal Affairs Minister Gordon Bryant told Parliament Nola would have to spend the rest of her life living in a rustic shack on the banks of a river in Australia's hinterlands.

Nola had lived with Brown and his wife in a suburb of Darwin since a few months after being born prematurely in a welfare settlement and placed in a hospital.

Bryant told the legislators the natural father of the girl, apparently concerned about her health, allowed Nola to live in a foster home after birth under the condition she be sent back at his request to be married within her tribe.

The girl lived happily with the Browns' six other children in the comfortable home and neighbors said she began primary school this year.

Bryant said she was taken from the home Sept. 12 by an officer of the department of aboriginal affairs and now lives in a shack called "Bark Humpty" on the banks of the Cadell River, 500 miles north-east of Darwin.

"I understand in this particular tribal situation the promising has taken place in the past and that at some time in the future, say at 10 or 12, the actual promise will or is likely to be consummated," he said.

Bryant said the government has no legal power to intervene. "We can only hope that the child is happily placed with her natural parents," Bryant said.

$9,325 PER PRISONER

OTTAWA (CP) — The annual cost of keeping one person in prison has risen by almost $6,000 in the last 10 years, says a report presented to the Commons Wednesday.

The average cost of keeping a person in a penitentiary during the 1971-72 fiscal year was $9,325 compared with $3,390 in 1962-63, said the report, prepared by the solicitor general's department.

The increased cost is due primarily to greater emphasis on rehabilitation programs, said Roger Tasse, deputy solicitor-general.

The programs, the additional staff and equipment required to put them into effect, and inflation boosted the figures, Tasse said in an interview.

Total penitentiary costs were almost $80 million in 1971-72, compared with $23.9 million in 1962-63. Prison populations increased by about four per cent annually during this period. The increase this year is 13 per cent, said Tasse.
